DR. COWLES TELLS OF FIGHT AT NAVY BALL

Wife of Complainant in Auld Navy Court-Martial

MRS. EDWARD S. COWLES

Mrs. Edward S. Cowles, the wife of the Emanuel Movement psycho-pathic specialist, complainant at the court-martial, went to Washington and started proceedings after Secretary Meyer had decided against a public court-martial. She was Miss Florence Jaquith of a Wellesley graduate and member of a wealthy Boston family. She eloped with Dr. Cowles less than two years ago.

Roars of laughter greeted much of the testimony of Dr. Edward S. Cowles at the court-martial proceedings at the Charlestown Navy Yard to-day in which grave charges are made against Paymaster George P. Auld and Dr. Ansey H. Robnett, two of the most prominent of the younger set of the navy.

Dr. Cowles is the complainant. On the stand he told how he and Mrs. Cowles, who was formerly Miss Florence Jaquith of a prominent Boston family, had gone to a naval hop in Charlestown last December. They had just entered and he was walking across the floor when Auld ordered him out. Later, down stairs, he said, Auld hit him in the back, they grappled and were parted.

Major Leonard, of counsel for the defence, opened a hot fire of cross-examination. The witness had to admit that he had appeared so many times to ask for permission to practice medicine that he "practically" could not remember how many. He had not given the subject much thought as to whether he was an allopath or a homeopath. He admitted that he was not examined the privilege of practicing medicine in this State.

"Perhaps so" and "I can't say," characterized much of his response to cross-examination.

Asked if he had received fees as a mental healer he said: "I can't say." Asked if he had received such fees in the name of his brother he made the same reply. The Major kept rubbing at him rather cheerily. He teased Dr. Cowles as he was ever caught cribbing at the examination referred to and when the witness replied that "he couldn't say, "but that if he was, he didn't know it, the laughter was so vehement that the judge advocate had to rap for order.

Women May Take Stand.

Miss Dorothy Hyder over whose photograph the row at the ball is believed to have started; Mrs. Cowles, the wife of the complainant; Miss Virginia Ames, at whose home the ball was held, and Miss Madeline Swift, an old friend of Auld, may all take the stand. It was decided to-day to allow a widest latitude in the investigation.

Earlier in the day Henry W. Ogden, who was in the trial room as the counsel for Cowles, was put out. Mr. Ogden said later that he would ask the Navy Department to pass on the question as to what right they had to put him out of a public court-martial.

Major Leonard tried to have the trial stopped on the ground that Auld have been punished by Secretary Meyer in a letter of reprimand, but the court refused to entertain his plea.

After the court had declined to dismiss the charges Major Cattin called on Auld to stand up. The paymaster then pleaded not guilty in a clear voice to each of the six specifications contained in the three charges.

Dr. Edward S. Cowles, who made the complaint, was the first witness. He is smooth-faced, with bushy hair. He went to the witness stand rather stiffly. Captain Helm swore him on a Bible, and he took a seat at the lower end of the table. He answered questions in such low tones that Captain Helm several times had to solemnly him to "speak up." He was examined by Judge Advocate Cattin.

Q. Where were you on the night of December 11, 1909? A. At a hop at the navy yard here.

Q. Was the accused there? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a fight with him? A. Yes.

Story of the Ruction.

Q. You, Dr. Cowles, and tell the Court what happened that night at the hop with reference to Paymaster Auld and your self? A. I reached the hall with Mrs. Cowles and we were preceded to the receiving committee. Afterwards I spoke to some parties. Mrs. Cowles had just started to dance the floor and I was following her. Dr. Robnett and Paymaster Auld approached me. Auld asked me if I was Dr. Cowles and I said "yes." Auld said, "Well, you leave this hall immediately and don't show up here again." I demanded an explanation. Auld said, simply, "Get out, you are not wanted here."

I asked him if Miss Ames desired me to go, and again asked an explanation. He said that Miss Ames knew all about it and so with Mrs. Cowles I left the hall. We went down stairs and there met Miss Ames, the daughter of Dr. Howard E. Ames, on whose behalf Dr. Long was. She said that she knew nothing about Mrs. Cowles and myself and Auld soon after called two gentlemen, and I thought personally, to go to see Auld. Auld came along and I demanded an explanation for

MEETING ON BANK TONIGHT

SOUTHBRIDGE, Jan. 31. Worried over the delay of the trustees of the Southbridge Savings Bank to make a complete statement of the bank's condition the depositors of the institution will hold a mass meeting in the Town Hall to-night at which a committee will be selected to confer with the trustees, and to find out what is being done to protect their interests.

It is expected that over 2,000 depositors, the majority of them French, will be represented at the mass meeting. The depositors have not condemned the trustees, but they are desirous of receiving definite information as to whether the bank is going into the hands of a receiver or whether it will still continue to do business.

Edward G. Dresser, appointed Town Treasurer to succeed John A. Hall, who held the triple office of treasurer and clerk of Southbridge Savings Bank, of the Y. M. C. A. and of the town of Southbridge, says:

Depositors Want Facts.

"The leading French people of the town will meet to-night to talk over the bank situation. A committee will be appointed to wait upon the bank trustees to learn if possible in what condition the bank's affairs now are. It is not intended to be an indignation meeting, but simply one to reassure the depositors as to their savings. So many reports have been circulated that we would like to know the truth from the trustees as to the bank's condition."

Bank Commissioner Arthur B. Chapin arrived here to-day and went into conference with President Paige of the bank. Neither Commissioner Chapin nor President Paige would talk for publication. From the fact, however, that commissioner Chapin came here to-day and that there is to be a trustees' meeting to-night, it is felt that a report on the bank must be made soon, if not to-night.

Prior to the depositors' meeting to-night the Board of Trustees will meet at the bank to talk over the situation. A committee will be named to inform the depositors as to the exact status of the bank.

Hall Aids Officials.

Hall, who is under bonds awaiting the action of the Worcester County Grand Jury on charges of theft of the bank's funds, is aiding the bank officials and examiners to prove the shortage. This afternoon at his home ex-Chapin stated that until over the bank books with Bank Examiner James D. Otis, and his counsel, Charles F. Choate.

The auditing committee of the bank was board because it failed to discover the discrepancies, contends that it done its very best to guard against such difficulty. This committee is made up of C. Fred Hill, Hall's personal friend, and a political lieutenant of Calvin D. Paige, president of the bank; C. W. Johnson and C. C. Winter.

"You see how long it took the bank examiners to find out there was anything wrong," commented Hill to-day. "How would it be possible for us to take such time?"

Investigation to-day shows that Hall spent over $25,000 a year for the past several years. He lost out thousands of dollars on his country estate at Southbridge, building two artificial ponds, which he stocked with speckled trout. His payroll throughout the Summer months at his home amounted to over $60 a day.

Dispute Over Note.

It was expected that Robert Campbell, the expert who has been examining Hall's accounts as town treasurer, would report to-day to make a statement, but Mr. Campbell early said: "The accounts are in such miserable shape that it is almost impossible to make progress toward unraveling the tangle. I shall be unable to make a report for a week at least."

A special meeting of the Board of Selectmen has been called for to-morrow, when the situation will be discussed. The selectmen, it is said, may take action toward securing payment by the bank of two notes for $21,000 that figure in the larceny charge against Hall. A dispute as to whether the town or the bank shall pay these notes is threatened.

HANDWRITING EXPERT DENIES RUSSELL CLAIM

By Ernest L. Tyng-mont, handwriting expert for William C. Russell, counsel in the Russell suit, occupied the witness stand all the morning at East Cambridge to-day. The entire time was taken up with his cross-examination by Attorney Leslie M. Simpson for Isabel Blake Russell, the claimant. Davenport's testimony was a complete denial of the statement made by the experts for the claimant.

Interest in the case centred to-day upon the mysterious visit to the courthouse of H., whose the bride belongs to an old and former Melrose resident. They were a well-to-do family.

Mrs. Cross and Luther Emerson, who at tried in a taxicab accompanied by defendants, Fielding, employed by the defence. They were taken to the courtroom and were during the examination.

After waiting for some time they left. Attorney Proctor refused to state the purpose of their visit.

Yesterday Daniel Blake Russell went to Melrose to attend the funeral of George Coburn, said to have been his boyhood playmate. The old nankeen carried a huge wreath of roses. The deceased was one of his most important witnesses.

THREE "SPEAK-EASY" KEEPERS ARE FINED

Charges of illegally keeping intoxicating liquors for sale were heard to-day by Judge Williams in the Roxbury Court against Mary Clougher of No. 6 Minden street, Roxbury, who was fined $50; Patrick and an Burnell, of No. 50 Longwood avenue, who were fined $20 each, and George Slason, of No. 21 Washington street, whose case was continued to February 2.

GETS A YEAR FOR ASSAULT ON WIFE

George E. Zanlos of No. 26 Valley street, Wakefield, was to-day sentenced to a year in the House of Correction by Judge Bruce of the Malden District Court, on the charge of assaulting his wife, and threatening her with a carving knife. It was testified that Chief of Police Pollard, with a squad of officers, broke into the house in time to save the woman's life. Mrs. Zanlos testified against her husband.

DIVORCED SON OF ALDRICH IS SECRETLY WED

Divorced but seven months, Edward Burgess Aldrich, eldest son of Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, Republican leader of the United States Senate, has taken a new wife. She was Miss Lucy Elsie Lawson, a young millinery designer in New York. His first bride was Miss Mary Larned Dorrance, a member of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in Providence.

The wedding took place at Troy N. H., where the bride belongs to an old and well-to-do New Hampshire family.

The wedding was a secret one and news of it did not become public until to-day when it was confirmed by Stuart M. Aldrich, a brother of the young groom, who is in Boston. The new bride becomes a sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The divorce case of last July's re called to the wedding. At that time, Mrs. Mary Larned Dorrance Aldrich obtained a decree from Senator Aldrich's son on the ground of non-support. Aldrich did not vigorously contest the divorce and the real cause intimated was incompatibility.

In fact, the allowance in the case was merely nominal for a family so wealthy as the Aldriches and connected so closely with the Rockefellers. Mrs. Aldrich got the custody of their daughter, Susan Kathrine Aldrich and $10 a week for the child's support. The wife asked for no allowance for her own support, but received none.

TWO RED STAR BOSTON LINERS

The Red Star line will put the ships Oakland and Stenland on a new direct service line between Boston and Antwerp the latter part of March, according to an announcement made by Frederik Tappin, Boston manager of the International Mercantile Marine, today. These boats will return by way of New York, and after discharging passengers and cargo will start again from this city.

Three other ships of the Red Star Line, the Manitou, Mesopotamia and the Menominee, are already making the run from Antwerp to Boston, but the new departure of direct service from Boston to Antwerp is the first ever installed.

To-day's announcement makes the third recent improvement in the Boston and European service. Not long ago the Holland-America line started direct service between Boston and Rotterdam, and since then the White Star Line put the Megantic in commission between Boston and Liverpool.

LIBEL CASES GIVEN TO JURY

The cases of George H. Pratt, editor of the Somerville Sun, and Rev. E. Leon Bayliss, charged with criminal libel against Mayor John M. Woods, were given to the jury at 10.52 o'clock this morning. Judge Bond charged the jury from 9.30 until 10.50 o'clock. Evidence in the case was finished Friday night. Court was then adjourned until this morning.

WELLMAN'S LATEST —NEW YORK TO PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 31.—It is reported that Walter Wellman, who sailed from New York for Europe Saturday, is planning a flight from New York to England or France in his Arctic airship. The dirigible will be equipped with larger engines and propellers. Mr. Wellman's balloon shed at Trainevilliers, where the balloon is housed, is flooded.

HOLD TWO ACCUSED AS PICKPOCKETS

Three pickpocket cases were heard at Roxbury Court to-day. William Clark and Frank Gately, charged with attempted larceny of Dudley street (prajina), were held until February 2. Clark in $500 and Gately in $300 bonds. Harry Lewis, said to have all kinds of aliases, was charged with stealing $8 from Mrs. Vashti M. Oliver, of No. 10 Humboldt avenue, as she was stepping on a Humboldt avenue car. His case was continued until March 1.

NICARAGUA CONSUL ROUTS AN ASSASSIN

MANAGUA, Jan. 31.—United States Vice Consul Caldera had a narrow escape from death to-day when he was attacked on the street between his office and his home by an armed man. With a dagger in his right hand, the assassin rushed for the vice-consul, who dodged and drew his revolver. When the assailant saw that Caldera was armed he fled. The police attempt to maintain the incident by calling it an attempted hold-up, but guards have been stationed at Caldera's office.

FRAMINGHAM'S EX-TREASURER IS A WITNESS

Testifies at Trial of Cummings Admitting His Own Wrongful Acts---Quick Work in Getting Jury.

John P. Lombard, former Town Treasurer of Framingham, confessed on the witness stand to-day that he had forged the names of Selectmen William H. Walsh and Frank P. Stockwell of Framingham to a note of the town of Framingham for $15,000.

He admitted that he wrote in the figures $87,222 in the body of the instrument and swore that he was told to do so by Charles S. Cummings, the Boston note broker.

Mr. Lombard, shaking like one with the palsy and weeping pitifully, made these and other statements at the opening to-day of the trial of Cummings on a charge of larceny of $15,000 from the town of Framingham.

Mr Leonard came into the Middlesex Superior court at East Cambridge with the assistance of some of the court officers. He was terribly broke. His replies to the questions of Assistant District Attorney Welt were in tone so feeble that the court stenographer could not hear. Even court officials could not hear his replies distinctly.

Witness Twice in Tears.

The jurors had to lean forward in the jury box. Mr Welt had to ask Mr. Lombard at time to speak louder. The witness broke down twice. He wept bitterly once he leaned his head down on his arms on the witness stand and was minutes to speak for a moment. At the close of the morning session Mr. Lombard had to be assisted from the witness stand across into the room. He went on the witness stand at 12.45 and testified for fifteen minutes, when court was adjourned for lunch.

Lombard was questioned on the direct testimony by Assistant District Attorney Welt:

Q. Where did you live in 1908? A. South Framingham.

Q. Did you occupy an official position? A. Yes, I was town treasurer.

Q. Have you been convicted any crime? A. No.

Q. Have any promises been made to you by anybody for confessing in this case? A. No, sir; except that I am to plead guilty.

Q. Before any promises were made to you by anybody for confessing in this case? A. I was not. I was under the impression on the witness stand, leaned my head over on his hands and began to say something, but he closed his head and covered. No sir.

Tears in Spectator's Eyes.

There were tears in the eyes of many in the courtroom, including some of the jurors, as he pitiful said:

Q. Do you know the defendant, Cummings? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him? A. Twelve to fifteen years.

At this point Mr. Lombard put his hand on his head and began to cry with hardness.

Q. What were Cummings's business in 1908? A. Broker.

Q. What kind, if you know? A. Stocks.

Q. Did he sell notes? A. Yes.

Q. Promissory notes? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see this paper before? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see this paper before? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I hand you Exhibit 1 and ask you what it is? A. Twelve to fifteen years.

At this point Mr. Lombard put his hand on his head and began to cry still harder.

Q. What were Cummings's business in 1908? A. Broker.

Q. What kind, if you know? A. Stocks.

Q. Did he sell notes? A. Yes.

Q. Promissory notes? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see this paper before? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see this paper before? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I hand you Exhibit 1 and ask you what it is? A. Twelve to fifteen years.

(Note—Exhibit 1 is the Framingham town note for $15,000, with the forgeries.)

Q. Is that your signature there, Mr. Lombard, appearing as assistant part of this note? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the signature of Town Clerk Hemenway? A.—Yes.

Q. What did you do with the note after you had written it? A. Mr. Cummings took it.

Q. Did you say that Mr. Cummings took it?

The witness nodded his head, meaning that he did say that. Then Mr. Welt said:

"I wish you would talk so the jury can hear, Lombard. I don't like to have to keep your attention. Now, just what did you say you have to say?"

Q. When did you next see this note after you had given it to Mr. Cummings? A. When it was shown to me a few weeks ago.

Q. You mean two or three weeks ago? A. Yes.

Q. Did you receive, as town treasurer, any money on this note? A.—I did not.

Q. Did you receive any of the money on that note individually? A.—No, sir.

Answers Almost Inaudible.

Q.—Did you receive any in any capacity on that note? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When did you come to be town treasurer? A.—After 1900.

Q.—When did you cease to be town treasurer? A.—October, 1909.

Q.—And you were town treasurer all the time between 1900 and 1909? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mr. Cummings present when the names of Mr. Walsh and Mr. Stockwell were written on that paper by you? A.—He was in my office.

Q.—Why did you write that paper out? A.—I was asked to.

Q.—Who asked you? A.—Mr. Cummings.

Q.—Do you remember what Cummings said to you when he asked you to make out that note? A.—I don't remember the exact conversation.

Q. What was the substance of it?

The answer of Mr. Lombard was inaudible to the stenographer and Judge Bond said that Mr. Welt might ask the question over again after lunch. The court then adjourned to 2 o'clock.

The trial of Cummings began shortly before noon before Judge Bond. The jury was selected in record time, only seven minutes being consumed from the time the name of the first talesman was called until the jury box was filled.

Assistant District Attorney Welt was assisted by Attorney Walter Adams, town solicitor for Framingham. Cummings is represented by Attorneys Henry C. Long of Cambridge and Joseph Burns of Boston and Lowell. Both are well known criminal lawyers. He has been out on $40,000 bail since his arrest and assisted his counsel in selecting the jury.

Outlining the Charges.

In opening the case for the Government Assistant District Attorney Welt said:

Charles S. Cummings, the defendant, is charged with stealing $15,000, the property of the inhabitants of the town of Framingham, at Lowell, on October 29, 1908. There are three counts to the indictment that on the same date and in the same place he stole the same amount from the Washington Savings Institution of Framingham. The case ends. I expect that the jury will instruct you to bring in verdicts of guilty as both cover the same transaction.

The other charge is that of uttering a false and forged note for $15,000, well knowing that it was forged. When the evidence is all in I shall ask you to pass upon one charge of larceny and one charge of uttering a forged instrument. All the cases hinge around a note purporting to have been given by the town of Framingham on October 29, 1908, and signed by the treasurer of the town, John P. Lombard.

Upon the note appear the signatures of William H. Walsh and Frank P. Stockwell, members of the Board of Selectmen. The reason for their signatures is that under the law a majority of the board must sign a note in order that it is not be drawn on. We will show you that neither Walsh nor Stockwell signed that note, but that their signatures were put there by Treasurer Lombard. We will show you that Lombard had blank notes on hand and that all the notes after being forged by Lombard were turned over to Cummings, knowing, knowing it to be a forged instrument. It is the Framingham Savings Institution at Lowell, where he received the money. Cummings then went to Boston and sold the Framingham note in order that the Boston Banking Company. He then came to Boston and placed that note in the vaults of the Fort Company. Later he drew the money.

The Jurors.

The jurymen are: Leonard H. Chandler, former Mayor of Somerville; Harry P. Bosson of Reading; Walter S. Hutchinson of Bergen Center; Mayor of Somerville; John W. Cremen of Somerville; James Fitzpatrick of Malden; Martin F. Dacey of Everett; Henry B. Brooks of Malden; John F. McKay of Everett; John M. Mahoney of Cambridge; Robert Rodger of Newton; John M. Schwartz of Weston. Seven talesmen were called. Three were challenged by the defendant and one by the government.

The first witness was William H. Walsh, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Framingham. He wrote his signature on the note which was turned over to the jury for inspection.

Mr. Walsh was shown the town note for $15,000, was in the instrument which is forgery, and he was asked regarding the signature which was on the note, which purports to be his. Mr. Walsh denied that the signature was his. He said that the signature was not genuine.

Frank P. Stockwell, who was a member of the Board of Selectmen, denied that he wrote the name purporting to be his. Mr. Stockwell testified that on October 29, 1908, the date upon the town note, he was in the Framingham Hospital, undergoing an operation.

CAUSE SOUGHT FOR BUILDING COLLAPSE

Building Commissioner Everett to-day took special charge of an investigation into the cause of the collapse of the three-story brick building on Grove street, Roxbury Saturday evening. Dunigan, who is in charge of the work in this district, directed the work of removing the debris, and once this is completed a hearing will be held to determine just what caused the collapse.

UNIONIST AND LIBERAL PACT? IRISH ROUSED

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Reports that the Unionists and Liberals would reach a compromise as to many matters in dispute in the present budget crisis alarmed the Nationalists today and a conference was held by the leaders who are at present in the city. Any effort at conciliation is viewed by the Irish as a direct menace to their plans for Home Rule. It is understood generally, too, that they have cause for alarm, for the issue of Home Rule is one that the Liberals may be willing to shelve, provided the Unionists will support, or at least not oppose, the Lloyd-George budget.

Despite the rumors of conciliatory moves, they were said to be made only by various members of the two leading parties, local experts of the Asquith party are drawing up plans to demand a party vote during the course of the election through investigation in many places. Methods used in the campaign will be demanded on the ground that an immense fund was provided for the purpose of corrupting the voters, that the greater part of this fund was not raised and contributed by investors who were fighting the passage of the tax which the Lloyd George budget imposes.

It is asserted that if the Liberals succeed in having a parliamentary inquiry conducted by the House of Commons, the election, even that in New York, will be revealed. It is declared that a partial recount was committed by means of corruption or intimidation and that the outcome of a complete and unbiased inquiry would result in the unseating of several Unionist members.

The make-up of the cabinet will not be determined by a conference to be held today or tomorrow by Premier Asquith and Chancellor Lloyd George on the Continent. Several changes are probable, but they will not be announced for several days.

The re-election of J. G. Hancock, labor candidate for the middle division of Derbyshire, announced today, completes the elections for the new Parliament in England. The remaining half-dozen constituencies to make returns are in Scotland and Ireland.

The final totals in England alone give the Liberals and Irishites a majority over 275 seats, the Liberals and Laborites combined 227, or a Unionist minority of 12, compared with a Liberal and Labor majority of 211 received in 1906.

SEINE IS RECEDING, BUT GREAT SUFFERING PREVAILS IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The flooded waters of the Seine began to fall more quickly as a result of a sharp frost that set in early today. The day is bright and clear and the whole city is rejoicing over its deliverance from the flood terror, though the grim shadow of pestilence hangs over the city and is causing the authorities as much alarm as did the flood itself.

In the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock the Seine had fallen a foot. Three more bridges were opened to traffic today and it is believed that within a few hours others can be used. Fully 500,000 persons, men, women and children lined the river today, despite the protests of the gendarmerie, who feared any sudden excitement would result in a panic and subsequent loss of life. Every acclamation that a further fall of the waters was covered tumultuously. All classes, rich and poor, aristocrat, bourgeois, plebeian and pauper mingled in the happy throng.

Now Fear Typhoid Scourge.

Several cases of typhoid fever are reported, but they are no more frequent than usual after such weather as the city has been subjected to. Leading sanitary authorities, headed by Professor Roux, president of the Pasteur Institute, met today and drafted a complete set of regulations to be followed.

A special meeting of the Council of the Seine was called for this afternoon to direct the police in enforcing the regulations effectively. The residents of Paris are warned to boil all water for drinking purposes and to use carbolic solution to eat raw vegetables. The use of quicklime as a disinfectant is imperative.

Ordered and owners of cellars and other flooded places are directed to clean and dry them at once.

Thrilling stories of gallant rescues by sisters of Mercy and priests in the slimy skirts of the city are being brought here by refugees. Scores of sisters of Charity of the Holy Cross, who have labored in houses in the worst of the flood districts and carried many to the relative safety, Allortville priests took up the work when orders and priests had become exhausted, and labored through the night to save people in the flood swept districts.

Relief Plans Made.

The authorities today have $1,500,000 pledged or in hand, and organized relief of the suffering and destitute is well under way. The homeless are taken to the nearest of the great refugee camps where they are fed and clothed. Those homeless who have escaped the flood's ravages are freely taken from cafes, restaurants and civil employes, soldiers, sailors and private citizens are hard at work in the city today relieving the stricken thousands.

Financial Failures is suffering from a heavy cold as the result of the exposure he encountered in his unremitting labors of rescue and relief. The workman who, during he got when he fell into the flood as he was about to be crushed in a metal mill at the Pont Alexander III. He clinged to the iron girders of the bridge for hours on the trip back to the palace he was thoroughly chilled and developed a severe attack.

The mercurial Parisians today are taking a much more hopeful view of the situation and sooner in Premier Briand's official announcement that the worst has passed. Business men, despite a portion badly foundered and big manufacturers say that the immediate trade outlook is almost disastrous. Many factories are closed and for incalculable paper has saved many industrial plants. Even the fashionable part of the whole country has been thrown into confusion, and it will be months before it straightens it out so trade will work back to normal conditions.

Revolutionists Are Feared.

With the sense of personal danger becoming more remote, recognition of the tremendous burden resting on the government is becoming more acute. Prompt and effective reorganization work must be had. It is declared today, or the most active and powerful factions of the discontented will cause popular ferment in this connection.

It is known that the government is giving considerable attention to these subjects. Efficient reorganization work would offer to the always formidable party the greatest opportunity it has had in years and its leaders would be justified in a demand to fan public dissatisfaction into revolution.

Endeavors are being made today to rig up temporary systems of lighting the great thoroughfares, particularly the boulevards. Darkness such as reigned last night constitutes a menace which the authorities believe must be ended immediately.

News from the outskirts of the city is more heeded today. Thousands of refugees from Genevilliers, Ville Neuve and Courbevoie are at Bedieres, where the authorities are making desperate efforts to provide for them. The most deplorable quarter in the city today probably is in the neighborhood of the Gare St. Lazare, which is deserted by its inhabitants and guarded by cordons of soldiers and police. Improvised bridges span roaring torrents made by broken drains, while shacks and filth is on the sides. Part of the trouble there was caused by an old forgotten river which was passed close to the Opera.

The cold wave today has strengthened hope that the relief works were. The first most acute now is that some terrible catastrophes will be caused by the collapse of undermined buildings.

A further cheering development today was the arrival of trains on the Orleans line by a branch line from Selsay. The disorganization of the railroads has resulted in two accidents. A suburban train collided with the Toulouse express, injuring twelve people, and shortly afterward the Bordeaux express and a Paris train collided in almost the same spot, injuring seven persons. After an investigation today it was declared that there was no hope of restoring the electric light and power services this week.

Whole Colony Wiped Out.

One of the most pitiable features of the flood was the wiping out of a colony of Roma (gypsy) dealers in the Genevilliers, the fourth of them are children. They had encamped on the banks of the Seine. The village was a cluster of poor hovels of plaster and earth, flanked with broken bottles and rags from the refuse barrels of Paris. The flood swept away every thing they owned. They are without food or shelter, and their sufferings have been bitter. The flood means irretrievable ruin to the entire colony.

Because of the helpless condition of many refugees the soldiers have been forbidden to fire on looters, many of whom are caught pilfering. Already outside the city gates the sheriff's forces have been organized to look for the dead victims. The casualties killed two of the lookers and four and two more at Bas. The rocker hand of Inspector Lebihan, of the Sureté, is upon pillaging deserted villas and houses on their way.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM MENACING SCOTLAND FLOODS

EDINBURGH, Jan. 31.—Creeks in Northern Scotland have been turned into raging rivers that threaten to destroy towns and villages in the valleys, following a sudden thaw that immediately after an almost unprecedented fall of snow. Inside Lochinvar, several have been overflowed and have already done heavy damage. Thousands are fleeing from their homes to the hills.

AMERICANS ONLY INCONVENIENCED, SAYS AMBASSADOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The State Department received a despatch today from Ambassador Bacon, at Paris, stating that it can learn of no Americans who are in trouble beyond suffering ordinary inconveniences from the flood. He says he expects to be able to transmit today or tomorrow from one-half million francs subscriptions to the French Red Cross. This money is unexpended out of Mme. Gould's donations sent direct to the American embassy, in addition to the $50,000 given by the American Red Cross Saturday.

Ambassador Bacon declares that the crisis of the flood is past. Before the flood began its recede many days were hoped, and darkly expected. Suburbs of Paris were flooded.

It is impossible to estimate the loss, he adds, but it is believed that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of the best crops and other damage and in communities other than Paris.

PARIS GRATEFUL FOR MONEY CABLED BY BOSTONIANS

Boston is very popular in flood-stricken Paris now. The $48,000 sent from this city to aid the submerged capital of France was received with expressions of profound gratitude. Official recognition came to Governor Draper today in a cablegram from United States Ambassador Bacon, who says:

"Prompt, generous response of ... subscribers gratefully received and, with expressions of sympathy, is greatly appreciated."

SQUIRTGUN BLINDS JERSEY WILDCAT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A wildcat pursued Bertram Donaldson of 1 E. 37 J., when he was driving in a sleigh from his home to Caldwell. Though his horse was speedy, Donaldson says the wildcat would have reached him had he not "carried a squirtgun charged with ammonia to protect himself from dogs. When the horse was almost winded and the wildcat was within a few feet of the sleigh Donaldson shot the charge of ammonia into the animal's eyes. The beast turned in disgust and gave piercing howls. It still tried to follow Donaldson, who was urging his fleet horse on, but being blinded the cat ran in a circle, course and made little headway. Donaldson kept his tired horse going up to the top of its remaining power until he reached Caldwell.

Especial efforts were made near the aqueduct of the Chemical Paper mill to find the body, without success.

POSTAL SAVINGS BILL IS DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The House Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, it was said today, will not take up the postal savings bill question until the postoffice appropriation bill has been reported and passed by the House. This will probably not be before the middle of February. There is a strong divisions of opinion developed among the members on the postal savings bank bill, and some of the leaders are in favor of postponing action until after the Monetary Commission makes its report, but the enthusiastic advocates of a postal savings bank say that not to pass the bill at this session might prove fatal to the success of the Republicans in the Fall elections. A special message on the subject is expected from President Taft.

ONLY POLICE TO SEE WELLESLEY BLOOMER GIRLS

Hereafter, practice by the fair athletes at Wellesley College will be witnessed only by members of the Wellesley police force. All other male spectators will be barred from the "gymnasium."

The faculty has issued an edict that the crowds of men and boys from Wellesley and nearby towns which have hitherto stood on the sidelines and admired the bloomer-clad runners, hockey players and archers, must be kept at least a quarter of a mile distant. The athletic girls receives, it is said, objected to the admiring gallery that followed their practice, and the faculty has established a dead line on each of the open sides of the athletic field. When Spring practice begins the male audiences will find two police officers on guard to prevent any visitors from passing the quarter mile line.

The Wellesley College athletic field is square in shape, the north and south sides bounded by a deep ditch and hemmed in by thick woods, while the east and west sides are open. With the approach of Spring the girls are accustomed to turn out and in large squads to practice running, hockey, archery, tennis and any good preparation for the annual field day held some time in May in order to get the best results undoubtedly they dress in the same style as those approved by the members of the faculty.

No ill luck to anyone it has been the custom of admiring men and boys to gather in force on those open sides of the field and watch the girls.

UNIONIST AND LIBERAL PACT? IRISH ROUSED

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Reports that the Unionists and Liberals would reach a compromise as to many matters in dispute in the present budget crisis alarmed the Nationalists to-day and a conference was held by the leaders who are at present in the city. Any effort at conciliation is viewed by the Irish as a direct menace to their plans for Home Rule. It is understood generally, too, that they have cause for alarm, for the idea of Home Rule is one that the Liberals may be willing to shelve, provided the Unionists will support, or at least not oppose, the Lloyd-George budget.

Despite the rumors of conciliatory moves that were said to be made and those by various members of the two leading parties, both aspects of the Asquith party are drawing up plans to demand a thorough investigation into the election methods used at the various polling places.

The inquiry will be based on the ground that an immense fund was provided for the purpose of corrupting the voters and that the greater part of this fund was raised and contributed by brewers who were fighting to repeal the tax which the Lloyd-George budget imposed.

It is asserted that if the Liberals succeed in having a committee appointed to conduct the inquiry, which will probably be the case, every club in New York will be revealed. It is claimed that gigantic frauds were committed by means of corruption or intimidation and that the outcome of a complete and unbiased inquiry would result in the unseating of several Unionist members.

The make-up of the new cabinet will be determined by a conference to be held to-day or to-morrow by Premier Asquith and Chancellor Lloyd George on the Continent. Several changes are expected, but they will not be announced for several days.

The re-election of J. G. Hancock, labor candidate for the middle division of Derbyshire, announced to-day, completes the election for the new Parliament in England. The remaining half-dozen contests were to make returns to-day Scotch and Irish.

The final totals in England alone give the Liberals and Labor party 229 seats, the Liberals and Laborites combined 227, or a United majority of 12, compared with a Liberal and Labor majority of 211 received in 1906.

SEINE IS RECEDING, BUT GREAT SUFFERING PREVAILS IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The flooded waters of the Seine began a full day's recession to-day as a result of a sharp frost that set in early to-day. The day is bright and clear and the whole city is rejoicing over its deliverance from the flood terror, though the grim shadow of pestilence hangs over the city and is causing the authorities as much alarm as did the flood itself.

In the twenty-four hours ending at 9 o'clock the Seine had fallen a foot. Three more bridges were opened to traffic to-day and it is believed that within a few hours others can be used. Fully 500,000 persons, men, women and children lined the river to-day, despite the protests of the gendarmerie, who feared any sudden excitement would result in a panic and subsequent loss of life. Every moment expected a further fall of the waters was cheered tumultuously. All classes, rich and poor, aristocrat, bourgeois, plebian and pauper, mingled in the happy throngs.

Now Fear Typhoid Scourge.

Several cases of typhoid fever are reported, but they are no more frequent than usual after each vacation time the city has suffered. The leading medical authorities, headed by Professor Roux, president of the Pasteur Institute, met to-day and outlined a complete set of regulations to be followed.

A special meeting of the Council of the Seine was called for this afternoon to direct the police to enforce these regulations effectively. The residents of Paris are warned to boil all water for drinking purposes and to refrain from action to eat raw vegetables. The use of quicklime as a disinfectant is imperatively ordered and owners of cellars and other flooded places are directed to clean and dry them at once.

Thrilling stories of gallant rescues by Sisters of Mercy and others in the poorer districts of the city are being brought here by refugees. Scores of Sisters of Charity at the risk of their own lives rowed from houses in the worst of the flood districts and carried food to the starving people. Allortville poleets took up the work when peddlers and firemen had thrown exhausted, and labored through the night to save people in the flood swept districts.

Relief Plans Made.

The authorities to-day have $1,500,000 pledged or in hand, and organized relief of the suffering and destitute is well under way. The homeless are taken to the nearest of the great refuge camps where they are fed and clothed. Those who do not have escaped the flood's ravages are freely given food by the manufacturers and wine dealers, soldiers, sailors and private citizens. Many of the latter have been daily rivalry today to alleviate want and provide comfort for the stricken thousands.

President Falliores is suffering from a heavy cold as the result of the exposure he encountered in his unremitting labors during the past few days. He ordered nothing be got when he fell into the flood as he was about to embark in a rowboat at the Pont Alexander III. He changed his clothes as he was about to start on the trip back to the palace he was thoroughly chilled and a threatening attack of grippe.

The mercantile Parisians to-day are taking a much more hopeful view of the situation and concur in Premier Briand's official announcement that the worst has passed. Business men, however, particularly the bankers and big manufacturers, say that the immediate trade outlook is almost disastrous. The loss of a day's output for mercantile paper has saved many institutions from ruin, but the total suspension of the whole country has been thrown into confusion, and it will be a week or straighten it out so trade will work back to normal conditions.

Revolutionists Are Feared.

With the sense of personal danger becoming more remote, recognition of the tremendous burden resting on the government is becoming more acute. Prompt and effective reorganization work must be had, it is declared to-day, or the powerful and powerful factions of the disgruntled will cause popular ferment in this connection.

It is known that the government is giving considerable attention to the revolutionists. Efficient reorganization work would offer to that always formidable party the greatest opportunity it has had in years and the Premier and his colleagues are strenuous to fan public dissatisfaction into revolution.

Outdoorsers are being made to-day to rig up temporary systems of lighting the great thoroughfares, particularly the railroad yards. Darkness such as reigned last night constitutes a menace which the authorities believe must be ended immediately.

News from the outskirts of the city is more hopeful to-day. Thousands of refugees from Gerneville, Ville Neuve and Courbevoie are at Houlgeres, where the authorities are making desperate efforts to provide for them. The most deplorable quarter in the city to-day probably is the neighborhood of the Gare St. Lazare, which is peopled by its inhabitants and guarded by cordons of soldiers and police. Improvised bridges span roaring torrents made by broken drains, while debris and filth lie on both sides. Part of the trouble there was caused by an old forgotten river which once passed close to the Opera.

The cold wave to-day has strengthened hope that the rains are over. The four most acute now is that some terrible calamities will be cause by the collapse of undermined buildings.

A further cheering development to-day was the arrival of trains on the Orleans line by a branch line from Sevigny. The disorganization of the railroads has resulted in two accidents. A suburban train collided with the Toulouse express, injuring twelve people, and shortly afterward the Bordeaux express and a Paris train collided in almost the same spot, injuring several persons. After an investigation to-day it was declared that there was no hope of restoring the electric light and power service this week.

Whole Colony Wiped Out.

One of the most pitiable features of the case was the wiping out of a colony of 6,000 rag pickers in the Asnieres district. One fourth of them are children. They are the poorest of the Paris poor. Their village was a cluster of poor hovels of plaster and earth flanked with boats and houses and rags from the refuse barrels of Paris. The flood swept away everything they owned. They are without food or shelter, and their sufferings have been bitter. The flood means irretrievable ruin to their entire colony.

Because of the helpless condition of many refugees the soldiers have been forced to shoot down without mercy any one caught pilfering. Already outside the flooded districts order has been largely organized to load the flood victims. The Seine has claimed two victims to-day and two more at Bale. The reader band of Sevigny, making its way to and Paris, pillaging deserted villas and homes on their way.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM MENACING SCOTLAND FLOODS

EDINBURGH, Jan. 31.—Creeks in Northern Scotland have been turned into raging rivers that threaten to destroy towns and villages in the valleys, following a sudden thaw and rain storm immediately after an almost unprecedented fall of snow. The Lothian country has been overflowed and have already done heavy damage. Thousands are fleeing from their homes in terror.

AMERICANS ONLY INCONVENIENCED, SAYS AMBASSADOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The State Department received a despatch to-day from Ambassador Bacon at Paris, saying that no American was in trouble beyond suffering ordinary inconveniences from the flood. He says he expects to be able to transmit to-day or to-morrow $100,000 in gold coin for the relief fiances to the French Red Cross. This money is presumably American contributions sent direct to the American embassy, in addition to $25,000 sent by the American Red Cross Saturday.

Ambassador Bacon declares that the crisis of the flood is past. Before the flood began to recede many dykes were burst, and thickly settled districts in the suburbs of Paris were flooded.

It is impossible to estimate the losses, he adds, but it is believed that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been lost to crops and other damage and in communities other than Paris.

PARIS GRATEFUL FOR MONEY CABLED BY BOSTONIANS

Boston is very popular in flood-stricken Paris now. The $48,000 sent from this city to aid the submerged capital of France was received with expressions of profound gratitude. Official recognition came to-day in a letter Draper to-day in a cablegram to United States Ambassador Bacon, who says:

"Prompt, generous response of your citizens gratefully received and, will ex ceed thousands of sympathy, is greatly appreciated."

SQUIRTGUN BLINDS JERSEY WILDCAT

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A wildcat purchased Bertram Donaldson of Fairfield, N. J., when he was driving in a sleigh from his home to Caldwell. Though his horse was speedy, Donaldson says the wildcat would have reached him had he not carried a squirtgun charged with ammonia to protect himself from dogs. When the horse was almost winded and the wildcat was within a few feet of his sleigh, Donaldson shot the charge of ammonia into the animal's eyes. The brute turned a somersault and gave piercing howls. It still tried to reach Donaldson, who was urging his tired horse on, but being blinded the cat ran in circling courses and made little headway. Donaldson kept his tired horse going up to the top of its remaining power until he reached Caldwell.

CANAL IS SEARCHED FOR MISSING GIRL

HOLYOKE, Jan. 31.—Ice and the extreme cold weather made futile the plan of emptying the canals to-day for the purpose of finding the body of Miss Emma Richter. The third level canal was practically drawn off, but the drop of twenty inches did not suffice to bring out the body. Especial efforts were made near the outgates of the Chemical Paper mill to find the body, without success.

CORONER'S JURY TO TAKE SWOPE CASE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 31.—It is regarded as certain that a coroner's jury will investigate the death of Thomas H. Swope either to-morrow or Wednesday. Sweet, county coroner, on his visit to Chicago.

Warrant Out for Dr. Cook?

BERLIN—Exhaustive inquiries fail to corroborate the report that Dr. Cook was undergoing treatment at Dr. Furer's sanitarium at Eberbach, Baden, until Friday night, when he is alleged to have decamped for Vienna. The Lokal Anzeiger's Heidelberg correspondent affirms, however, that Dr. Cook was at the sanitarium under the name of Gunther until the night before last. Another newspaper report alleges that a warrant for Dr. Cook's arrest has reached Heidelberg.

POSTAL SAVINGS BILL IS DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The House Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads it was said to-day, will not take up the postal savings bank question until the postoffice appropriation bill has been reported and passed by the House. This will probably not be before the middle of February. There is a pronounced division of opinion among the members on the postal savings bank bill, and some of the leaders are in favor of postponing action until after the Monetary commission makes its report, but the enthusiastic advocates of a postal savings bank say that not to pass the bill at this session might prove fatal to the success of the Republicans in the Fall elections. A special message on the subject is expected from President Taft.

Ward, a nurse in the Boston City Hospital. The ceremony was celebrated by the Rev. Michael T. McManus, and was followed by a supplemental mass, celebrated by the Rev. Matthew McCabe, S. J., of New York, a brother of the bridegroom. The romance began a year ago, when Miss Ward, a friend of Mr. McCabe was a patient in the City Hospital and attended by Miss Ward. Mr. McCabe met her when he visited his friend and they fell in love.

ONLY POLICE TO SEE WELLESLEY BLOOMER GIRLS

Hereafter, spectics by the fair athletes at Wellesley College will be witnessed only by members of the Wellesley police force. All other male spectators will be barred. The cause is "obscenity."

The faculty has issued an edict that the crowds of men and boys from Wellesley and nearby towns which have hitherto flocked on the sidelines and admired the bloomer-clad runners, hockey players and strollers, must be kept at least a quarter of a mile distant. The police will see to it themselves, it is said, objected to the admiring gallery that followed their practice, and the faculty has established a dead line on each of the open sides of the athletic field. When Spring practice begins the male audiences will find two police officers on guard to prevent male visitors from passing the quarter mile line.

The Wellesley College athletic field is square in shape, the north and south sides bounded by a deep ditch and hemmed in by thick woods, while the east and west sides are open. With the approach of Spring the girls are accustomed to turn out and in large squads to practice running hockey, archery, bowling and golf in preparation for the annual field day held some time in May. In order that the best results obtainable they dress in bloomers for the occasion, and are the members of the faculty.

It is said that it has long been the custom of admiring men and boys to gather in force on the open sides of the field and watch the girls.

LAUGHS AT WITNESS HALT DIGNITY OF THE CHARLESTOWN NAVAL COURT

DR. COWLES "CAN'T SAY" AND "DOESN'T REMEMBER" ABOUT HIS MEDICAL RECORD.

sis strange conduct. He said, "Don't come that with me." He pushed me and then struck me in the back. My head struck against the door. We grappled, but were soon separated. Auld ran upstairs and I haven't seen him since.

No Cause for Attack.

Q—Do you know of any justifiable cause for this attack? A—I do not and have not received any explanation yet.

Q—Did you consider that Auld was acting as an individual or as a part of the committee? A—I presumed that since he and Dr. Bennett were together they were a part of the committee.

This ended the direct examination. Major Leonard cross-examined Dr. Cowles.

Q—How long after Miss Agnew's visit used was it before Auld retracted her name? A—About 25 minutes.

Q—I understood you are a medical man. Do you live in Boston A—I do.

Q—Have you ever submitted to practice medicine in Boston?

Major Catlin objected at this point. Major Leonard argued that Dr. Cowles was not on trial, stood at the stand and decided "he is not a credulous witness in this court." The court retired and, after some argument, admitted the question, which was re-framed by Major Leonard.

Q—Have you ever appeared to ask permission to practice medicine A—Yes.

Q—How many times? A—I don't know.

Q—How many times can you remember? A—Perhaps so.

Q—Have you appeared once? A—Perhaps so.

Q—Have you appeared twice? A—Perhaps so.

"Perhaps"—"I Don't Know."

Q—Have you tried to pass three times? A—Perhaps so.

Q—Four times? A—I don't know.

"I move that the Court observe the demeanor of this witness," declared Major Leonard, in an indignant tone.

"It is in contempt. Such conduct as this would not be tolerated in any court in the land."

Then turning to Dr. Cowles again, he asked, emphatically:

Q—Then you won't say how many times you have tried to pass to practice medicine? A—I don't know.

Q—Did you feel at ease all you not fail? A—I didn't receive permission to practice.

Q—Is it the custom for men who pass to practice medicine in this State? A—Not in the State board.

Q—Don't you think that you ought to find out? A—I suppose so.

Q—Do you regard a physician as an ally, public or a homeopathic physician? A—Any physician.

Q—Don't you? A—I haven't studied that very thoroughly.

Laughter in Court.

These questions and answers brought continuous laughter throughout the court. Even Major Catlin, Judge Advocate, seemed unable to keep his countenance straight. Major Leonard again declared that the court and the witness was not assisting as it should in the trial, and then, after a talk with the Court as he could and examining his notes, said:

Q—Are you Dr. Cowles a medical man or a physician? A—I am not allowed to practice within this State.

Q—Are you a medical healer? A—I am not a practicing physician.

Q—Do you practice? A—I practice a little.

Q—Have you told you I am not a practicing physician.

Q—Did you ever take fees for medical services? A—I have.

Q—Will you say on your oath that you never have taken fees for medical healing? A—I can't say.

Q—Did you ever render a bill for medical healing? A—I can't say.

Q—Didn't you render a bill for medical healing in the name of your brother? A—You'll have to ask him.

Again, "I Can't Say."

Q—No, I'm asking you. Didn't you render a bill for mental healing in the name of your brother? A—I can't say.

Q—Did you ever render a bill for mental healing in the name of anyone else, or did you ever use anybody as an instrument for sending out a bill for mental healing? A—I can't say.

Q—Do you know Dr Edwin R Harvey, president of the State Board of Registration in Medicine? A—I can't say.

Q—You took examinations, didn't you, to practice medicine in this State? A—Yes.

Q—Well, didn't you see Dr. Harvey when you took the examination? A—I suppose I did.

Q—Would you sit with reference to Dr. Harvey in the examination? A—I can't say.

Q—Were you very candid telling at that time? A—I can't say.

Q—You don't know whether you were very candid telling or not? A—I can't say.

Q—Don't you know whether you were very candid telling or not? A—I don't know.

In order that his trial board could discuss the questions that arose, Major Leonard moved that the court adjourn. It was so decided to follow the witness' attitude in the examination of all witnesses.

GEORGE R AULD — Photo. by Copyright

AULD'S PROTEST DENIED BY COURT

Protest that the gilding of gold lace cast the dignity of naval etiquette, the court martial proceedings against Paymaster George R. Auld of the Wabash and Dr. Amory H. Bennett began at 10 o'clock today in Building No. 107 of the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Judge Advocate A. W. Catlin presided at the trial. As counsel for Auld appeared Captain Herbert Ilenshinger and Major Henry Leonard.

The court consisted of nine men, each give of the Judge Advocate. Prosecutor Catlin opened the proceedings by turning to Auld and asking:

"Are you ready?"

Auld and Major Leonard arose.

"We do not object to delay these proceedings," said the major, "but we have a very material witness in the case who is not here yet. Should this witness not reach here by the time the defense is to be put in we shall have to ask for a delay at that time."

While court will take that matter into consideration," replied Major Catlin.

Civil Lawyer Barred.

Major Leonard—We understand that the complainant is represented by a Boston lawyer. He is in the room."

Major Catlin—All witnesses in this case will please retire.

Some one then in the room got up and walked out. Major Leonard said that a lawyer representing Dr. Cowles had no more right to remain in the court than a witness.

Major Catlin—Is the lawyer here now?

Major Leonard—Yes, sir.

Major Catlin—Please bring him in.

Major Leonard: "Henry W. Ogden of Whipple, Sears & Ogden."

Then this Mr. Ogden arose. He said that he desired to be heard if he could be. There was a shaking of heads around the table and a clanking of swords as their ends dropped on the floor as though to emphasize the protest. Major Leonard entered an objection to the presence of Mr. Ogden.

The court was cleared so that the matter might be threshed out in secret. After a long talk the court agreed that the lawyer would be barred and Mr. Ogden took his hat and coat and left.

Then the charges were read against Paymaster Auld. There were three specifications.

The first specification charged Auld with conduct unbecoming a gentleman in that he and Dr. Rebnett had make an attack upon Dr. Cowles at a naval dance. Auld is said to have used this language to Dr. Cowles:

"Leave this place and do not come here again."

The second point in the charges was that Auld was guilty of falsehood in that he had stated that his action in ordering Cowles out of the hall was known and approved by Miss Agnes, the daughter of the host.

The third point was that Auld had been guilty of maltreating an inhabitant—that is, of having punched Cowles.

As soon as the charges had been read Major Leonard asked that the first specification be stricken out because it lacked the allegation of intent. At the same time the Major declared that he had a further motion to make in as he would offer a plea to bar a continuance of the trial.

Fight Against Continuance.

It was announced after the proceedings started again that the first specification would not be stricken out. Then Major Leonard began an argument against a continuance of the trial on the ground that Auld had once been punished for the identical charges now before the court.

"As for the argument that the reprimand is private, does any officer here believe that a letter filed with the naval paymaster's record, published throughout the service, placed where it may be examined and become a bar to his promotion —can any one say that is a private report, mind?

Bar to Promotion.

"Imagine if this man is convicted again by this court, you will have beside his name on the paymaster's register, first, a private letter of reprimand from the secretary of the navy, and, second, your conviction. You will have punished a man twice for the same offense.

The Judge-advocate overruled Major Leonard and the trial proceeded.

Before the court convened today, Joseph Auld, father of the accused paymaster, said regarding Mrs. Cowles' connection with the case:

Indorsed Senator Lodge to have Secretary Meyer call a court-martial.

"It is inconceivable that the government of the United States would order a court-martial on mean and petty as is only this court martial. I went to Washington and confronted Senator Lodge and asked him why he forced this overzealous action against my son. He denied all his dignity and said: 'Sir, I never forced a court martial.' Mrs. Cowles called on me. I told her I had nothing to do with her.

"And yet Mr. Cowles comes back from Washington and says that her great, good friend, Lodge, will bring my son to 'justice.'"

DR. COWLES HAS BEEN IN LIMELIGHT IN BOSTON BEFORE

Dr. Edward Spencer Cowles, descendant of a proud old Virginia family, came into the limelight in the North in October, 1908, when he married Miss Florence Jaquith of No. 1 Exeter street. Miss Hay, directly against the wishes of her mother, Mrs. Harry N. Jaquith, an attorney.

The couple became acquainted through the Emmanuel Movement. Dr. Cowles was practicing psychology for the Emmanuel Movement under the Rev. Elwood Worcester. He was also connected with the Neurological Department of Harvard University and was becoming noted as a nerve specialist.

His bride was a member of the younger Back Bay set, a charming and pretty girl. The first known of the marriage was when telegrams from Bridgeport announced their wedding in St. Pauls Church of that city on October 5, 1908. It was an interesting story. Miss Jaquith had been visiting Miss Elizabeth Sturgis at Greenfield Hill, Ct. She and Dr. Cowles went to Bridgeport unattended and were married by the Rev. Earl H. Kenyon.

A Little Shy on Cash.

Bridgeport dispatches also related that Dr. Cowles arrived in Bridgeport with only enough ready cash to pay the license fee. He has property enough, it happened to be caught in a place where he had to acquaintances, with only his check book to cash him through. The Bridgeport City Clerk declined to cash a check for him. Dr. Cowles was disturbed for a moment. But he went to the Rev. Mr. Kenyon, explained his predicament, satisfied the clergyman as to his identity, and had a check cashed by Mr. Kenyon. Having accommodated Dr. Cowles in fact, the minister then married the pair, getting back as a marriage fee a generous portion of the money he had advanced on Dr. Cowles' check.

Dr. Cowles brought his bride back to Boston to make his peace with his father-in-law.

According to the reports printed in the Boston papers at that time, there was considerable of a hitch about the latter plan. Attorney Harry C. Jaquith, father of the bride, was angry. He was quoted the next day as saying:

"I did not in any way sanction the marriage, nor do I approve of it now. My daughter disobeyed me. She married against my wishes. If Dr. Cowles said he married her with my consent, it is untrue. I never quite fancied him and I told my daughter so. He called at the house frequently and was entertained there with other men who were interested in the Emmanuel Movement.

"After my daughter attended Wellesley I sent her abroad to complete her education. Now I have disowned her."

Doctor Tells Another Story.

But Dr. Cowles, who was concerned with his bride at the Hotel Victoria, told another story, saying:

"There has always been the sweetest possible attitude shown toward me by all of my wife's relatives.

"Of course our quiet marriage was quite a surprise to our friends and relatives. We sought a quiet marriage, and because we feared we could not obtain parental consent, but because we wished to avoid a large marriage display in Boston. To my knowledge Mr. Jaquith never showed any disapproval of our intentions. I should be glad to meet Mr. Jaquith here at any time."

Dr. Cowles came North from Williams long, Va. He is a graduate of William and Mary College, the University of Virginia and of Harvard Medical School, class of 1906. He specialized in nervous and mental diseases. He is a cousin of Dr. Edward Cowles, one of the foremost specialists of New England. He was one of the delegates to the International Neurologists Congress in Washington. After the couple North he made his home at No. 106 West Forty-eighth street, New York city.

BABY'S ITCHING SOOTHED AT ONCE

And Soon Cured Perfectly and Economically—Doctor Called It Eczema and Little Sufferer Rubbed and Twisted All the Time.

CUTICURA AGAIN PROVED "THE GREAT SKIN CURE"

"My baby boy was about nine months old when he had a breaking out on his neck which was very annoying. It used to make him very fretful and cross because it seemed to worry him so much. In the meantime I was sick myself, I had my doctor look at the baby and he told me it was eczema and he wanted to treat it. But a friend of mine told me she knew it could be cured cheaper than any doctor could do it for and, in many cases, had it. I started using the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which I soon found out was what I ought to have had before, for the eczema seemed to itch so the baby could not bear his head still and it was rubbing and twisting all the time. I used the Cuticura Remedies about three times the first day and began to notice the good it was doing, for he began to get real from rubbing his neck. So I used them for a month by using Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and now no one would find that ever had any kind of breaking out, and since then I have never been without the Cuticura Soap nor the Cuticura Ointment. Mrs. Lula Dorsey, 12 Browns Ct., S. W., Washington, D. C., Oct. 7, 1908."

INCOME TAX BY STATE, OR FEDERAL TAX?

The first day of the income tax hearing in the State House passed off without even the mention of "cents." The hearing still continued tomorrow and on Wednesday and Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock in each.

Dennis R. Farley of Irving, Senate Statistician and the Committee on Federal Relations, lived an illuminating question and a ton or three of those who favored the proposition.

If Massachusetts collected a State income tax, for State purposes, wouldn't you prefer a local tax of that kind, keeping the money here at home, to a Federal tax collected and spent by Washington?

Some of those present at the hearing pointed out that the collection of many millions by the Federal Government, by the income tax, would necessarily greatly reduce the tariff schedules, if not do away with them altogether.

Representative Meleran of Dorchester pleaded for the tax. Millions in a few years, he said, would be added to the wealth of Massachusetts if it were necessary for the Commonwealth to collect a local tax of some rate. He expressed his doubts.

Rich Leeches on Public.

George W. Allen of East Bridgewater, a Civil War veteran, who once got in the public service, said he was glad to see a man who is a man would long suffer such conditions as exist today in the Grand Army. Now, said the Grand Army man, get away from their doings and their graft. Some of the rich are a public expense. The very poor pay more proportionately than the rich. Millions of dollars in Europe and draw their revenues from the United States. Our people are too long going to stand it.

There was no organized body to say a word for the tax before the committee. No attorney appeared on the proposition of the Commonwealth.

F. Gerry Brown, who came within 10,000 votes of being elected Democratic Governor in 1906, spoke.

"The decision of the very nation itself," said Mr. Brown, "are involved in this question. The opponents of this bill and equitable tax count on the aid of the Eastern States, and the fringe of States around them, so that one-quarter of the Union may offset the rising tide of West and South. Massachusetts alone may be enough to hold up this amendment."

Like Conditions in France.

"It was never the policy of the nation to tax the sum of small income. He was supposed to be doing his share when he gathered and educated his children. Men should be taxed in proportion to their ability to bear the burden.

"Why shouldn't the swollen fortunes and the enormous gifts million bear their due and full proportion of the cost of maintaining it? In what other way are you going to raise a like taxation for states?

"Do you realize that conditions in this country are not dissimilar at the time of the French Revolution? I know it to be improper to discuss the French Revolution from this platform, but I tell to look at the facts of today in the light of history. Human nature hasn't changed.

"The one mitigating factor in our condition, gentlemen, is that Providence is going on in crops. We as a nation wait only for the time when the crops fail to bring on the revolution. Then will you invite the deluge?"

CAPTAIN BARTLETT GUEST OF CHAMBER

Captain Bartlett of Commander Peary's ship was the guest of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today. By unanimous request he spoke on informal talk describing the preparations made for the trip to the Pole. The members of the Chambers were introduced later in the rounds, and tendered him an unanimous vote of thanks. Governor Draper was the guest of honor and members of the Chambers at luncheon.

PULLMAN CO. WINS AGAINST KANSAS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31—The United States Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision in favor of the Pullman Car Company in the case of that company against the State of Kansas in which it sought to restrain the Pullman Company from doing business in Kansas because of its refusal to pay taxes. The case was similar to that of the Western Union Telegraph Company against the State of Kansas, recently decided in favor of the Western Union.

ARCHBISHOP URGES WORK FOR CHARITY

Earnest attention is being given today by the Catholics of Boston to Lenten duties, and by others as well, to the words of Archbishop O'Connell on the tremendous value of self-denial, the need of charity and the need of united effort.

The archbishop also cautioned his audience against that fear which so frequently obscures a person's real wealth—the fear of losing their wealth.

The Archbishop's remarks were made during the course of the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Charitable Club at No. 1,472 Washington street. He was received by Mrs. William McCarthy and Mrs. Thomas Lee of the club. He had many members of the club in his audience while addressing the members, he said in part:

Importance of Unity.

"I have frequently asked Mrs. McCarthy as to the progress of the society of the club and have always received a satisfactory answer. Mrs. McCarthy has never complained to me, but I feel convinced that the work is progressing in a glowing manner. While the multiple duties of my office, I am unable to visit the home as frequently as I would, but I wish every one of you to realize the good this work is doing is of importance.

"Let the example of the work of the club bring success to us again.

"I am glad to know that from there has been a clash.

"Let us be sure of our faith here who can be called upon to do the work of God. There are few very rich, many well to do, and very many in the middle class doing their work toward the church, but, I fear, the poor suffer greater as compulsions can be obtained.

"There was an organized body to say a word for the tax before the committee. No attorney appeared on the proposition of the Commonwealth.

F. Gerry Brown, who came within 10,000 votes of being elected Democratic Governor in 1906, spoke.

"The decision of the very nation itself," said Mr. Brown, "are involved in this question. The opponents of this bill and equitable tax count on the aid of the Eastern States, and the fringe of States around them, so that one-quarter of the Union may offset the rising tide of West and South. Massachusetts alone may be enough to hold up this amendment.

Like Conditions in France.

"It was never the policy of the nation to tax the sum of small income. He was supposed to be doing his share when he gathered and educated his children. Men should be taxed in proportion to their ability to bear the burden.

"Why shouldn't the swollen fortunes and the enormous gifts million bear their due and full proportion of the cost of maintaining it? In what other way are you going to raise a like taxation for states?

"Do you realize that conditions in this country are not dissimilar at the time of the French Revolution? I know it to be improper to discuss the French Revolution from this platform, but I tell to look at the facts of today in the light of history. Human nature hasn't changed.

"The one mitigating factor in our condition, gentlemen, is that Providence is going on in crops. We as a nation wait only for the time when the crops fail to bring on the revolution. Then will you invite the deluge?"

CAPTAIN BARTLETT GUEST OF CHAMBER

Captain Bartlett of Commander Peary's ship was the guest of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today. By unanimous request he spoke on informal talk describing the preparations made for the trip to the Pole. The members of the Chambers were introduced later in the rounds, and tendered him an unanimous vote of thanks. Governor Draper was the guest of honor and members of the Chambers at luncheon.

PULLMAN CO. WINS AGAINST KANSAS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31—The United States Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision in favor of the Pullman Car Company in the case of that company against the State of Kansas in which it sought to restrain the Pullman Company from doing business in Kansas because of its refusal to pay taxes. The case was similar to that of the Western Union Telegraph Company against the State of Kansas, recently decided in favor of the Western Union.

LE BLANC GIRL TO TELL WILL STORY TO-DAY

Brought into court on 5 writ of habeas corpus, Hattie Le Blanc, held at the East Cambridge Jail on the charge of murdering Clarence F. Glover of Waltham, is to be a witness today in the proceedings brought by the four brothers and a sister of Glover who were not made beneficiaries of the will.

The proceeding is expected to be the occasion of a sensational fight between the lawyers in the case, as District Attorney Higgins is said to have announced his determination to be present and to oppose anything that will tend to affect the criminal proceeding against the young housemaid, while it is the intent of Attorney John J. Sennott of the four contestants to attempt to show by the girl's testimony that the will should not be allowed. In doing so, it is expected, not a little evidence bearing on the case of Hattie Le Blanc will be brought out if the move is successful.

The girl's attorneys are quite willing that she be given an opportunity to testify freely, as they feel that if full publicity be given her case it will be of benefit to her.

The claim of the contestants is that the will filed was not the genuine will of Clarence F. Glover, and in support of the claim they assert that while the body of the instrument was typewritten, the date was filled in in long hand by some other person than Glover. It is intimated that as Hattie Le Blanc was in the Glover house for three days after the killing, her evidence may have some bearing on that point, as she could have seen and heard what transpired within the house.

The will bequeaths three-quarters of Glover's estate to his widow and one-quarter to Seymour Glover, a brother.

CONGRESS TO PROBE SWIFT MEAT LETTER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—A Congressional investigation of the business methods of the Swift Packing Company is to be demanded by the National Anti-Food Trust League of Washington immediately after a charter of incorporation be granted, application for which will be made tomorrow.

This action on the part of the league is the result of the letter sent out by the New England manager of the Swift Company in Boston to the branch managers, directing them to demand the highest prices for meats and provisions, and declaring that the present agitation is only a spasmodic affair and that it will soon blow over and higher prices will again prevail.

A meeting of the league will be held to-day. A general campaign on all grocers who have been boycotting a certain pure food company for what is termed "underselling" will also be instituted by the league. The names of such grocers have been procured and will be made public in much the same manner as the names of the merchants in New York who were found giving light weight on all foodstuffs handled by them. The League will also demand an investigation of the grocers' system in the national capital. It is believed that for more than three years the grocers here have been in league to systematically run up the prices of foodstuffs. About all grocers handle meats.

LENT'S COMING GIVES IMPETUS TO SOCIETY

By ELLIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Society matrons, belles and debutantes will gather in unusually large number this afternoon at the Mason house on Exeter street to attend the final reception in the series that Mrs. Chester Whitin Lasell of Whitinsville, and her two daughters, the Misses Hildegarde and Marion Lasell, are giving as one of the last of their social functions before the beginning of Lent. Miss Hildegarde came out last Winter and will of course help entertain as many of her sister debutantes of 1909 as will be present, while Miss Marion, this year's bud, and consequently the recipient of any number of the season's honors, will assist in receiving the younger set, that enviable group, the buds of 1910. The typical pre-Lenten affair which the Lasells are to give, however, is the masquerade which they have planned for the second day of the new month. The masquerade will be in honor of Miss Marion and will be one of the final debutante functions of the season.

One of the interesting recent engagements that is causing no end of pleasant comment is that of the prominent chilliam, Herman M. Burr of Chestnut street, and Mrs. Philip L. Wheatland (Alice Pratt) also of Chestnut street. Because of the prominence of the families to which both Burr and Spence belong, their wedding is anticipated as an unusually important of the presumably near future. Mr. Burr is a graduate of Harvard University of the class of '77 and a member of the Somerset, Union, Somerset Club, Tennis and Racquet and the University Club of New York City.

NEW ZANGWILL PLAY COMING

Boston theatregoers are at last going to have a chance to see Walker Whiteside in Israel Zangwill's great play, "The Melting Pot," which has for two solid seasons been entertaining audiences in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. Next Monday night Liebler & Co. will bring this notable play to the Majestic Theatre for a limited engagement with the same cast of players as seen at the new Comedy Theatre, New York, where it has just completed a run of five months.

The play has been enthusiastically indorsed by a wonderful array of eminent people among them Theodore Roosevelt, Jacob Schiff, Oscar Straus, Daniel Whitney, Jane Addams, Hamlin Garland, Augustus Thomas, Ogle Read and Booth Tarkington, to say nothing of a hundred clergymen, writers and men of affairs.

Mr. Whiteside is said to be a superb actor and his support includes Frederick Perry, John Blair, Grace Stewart, Sheeo Oun Rock, Louise Muldoon, Leonora von Ottinge and Mary Lloyd are the important members of a most competent cast soon to go on sale Thursday.

WIPES OUT FAMILY, THEN IS A SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Sending his wife out to "buy some candy," Policeman Daniel F. Ryan, in a room occupied by his little family at No. 209 East Fiftieth street, twelve feet around and filled with smoke, three years old, shot and fatally wounded his son, William, nine years old, and sent a bullet in the right side of his own head. He will die.

3 ALARMS FOR 2 SMALL FIRES

Three alarms, two of them for small fires and one of them false, kept the lusty firemen on the jump early to-day. The total damage did not exceed $300.

About 1:30 Patrolman Macksey of the Lagrange street station discovered a blaze on the rear floor of the three-story wooden building at No. 919 Washington street, occupied by the Bay State Cigar Company. The blaze was quickly extinguished and the firemen built a bonfire in the gutter of matches that had not been burned in the fire. The damage was estimated at about $200. Rags and matches are supposed to have started the blaze.

An hour later a fire was discovered in a storage restaurant on the second floor of the three-story brick building at No. 1,159 Washington street. A lighted cigar butt had set fire to a piece of straw matting. A chemical line soon put out the blaze and the damage was slight.

Less than an hour afterward the watchman of the E. Houston Company's five-story steel structure and department store at No. 27 Temple place, saw steam escaping from a pipe directly over the door and thought the building was on fire and sounded an alarm.

SKYROCKET FINANCIER IS DYING, BROKE

Lewis Green "Skyrocket" Tewksbury, the drug clerk of Manchester, N. H., who as a broker handled millions in New York, Mexico City, London and this city, lived in the most costly and luxuriant surroundings and kept a string of the most valuable race horses in the country, is dying at the Charity Hospital in New Orleans, with not friends nor remedies.

Tewksbury has been at the hospital since Friday, when he fell from a bootblack's chair in the Cosmopolitan Hotel and was badly injured. He fractured his nose and suffered internal injuries in the fall, but attends in an aggravated form is his principal trouble.

At the time of the accident he was discussing plans with New Orleans financiers to build a new $3,000,000 hotel. His New York career and his sensational failures there and in London were not known in that city and his project was receiving favorable consideration.

Tewksbury's checkered and meteoric career is known throughout this country, Mexico and England, and his first success in Wall street and his peculiar methods of handling other people's money caused for him the sobriquet of the "Skyrocket Financier."

DULL DAY IN MARKET FOR REAL ESTATE

The files of the Real Estate Exchange show a falling off in the entries of record at the Suffolk Registry of Deeds for the past week from the totals of the corresponding week of a year ago, although the decrease is very small and not sufficient to denote a poor market. In fact, the chairman of the trading has been excellent and many important sales have been successfully negotiated.

The following table, compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, show the entries of transfers, mortgages and the amount of mortgages for the week ending January 29 at the Suffolk Registry of Deeds:

	1910.	1909.	1908.
No. of Transfers.....	256	420	351
No. of Mortgages...	159	176	151
Amt. of Mortgages..	$617,742	$655,500	$710,150

The appended table, also compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, gives in detail each day's transactions for the week beginning January 24 and ending January 29:

Date.	Sales.	Mtgs.	Amt.
January 24	60	36	$120,000
January 25	59	28	83,000
January 26	39	28	134500
January 27	53	24	147,500
January 28	45	25	73,015
January 29	29	18	89,000
Total.....	356	159	$847,742

Among the sales reported to-day was that of a frame house and $5,000 square feet of land on Moulton street, near Lawton street, Dorchester, which have been sold by Agnes G. Fraim to Austin P. Sondiach. This property is assessed on a total valuation of $7,500, which $1,400 is on the land.

In Clinton the large lot of land at the corner of Main and Suffolk streets, containing 100,000 square feet and assessed for $4,000, was sold by Mary A. Bigelow to Adolph Anderson, et al. Mrs. Bigelow bought these premises about two years ago for $5,000.

The same company has also purchased from the Clinton Land Company the large tract of land on Main street, containing 50,500 square feet of land, taxed for $4,000. The company will remodel and occupy these two properties.

BOSTON ELEVATED WINS DEATH SUIT

The $5,000 damage suit brought against the Boston Elevated by Thomas Lydon of Norwood, as administrator of the estate of his brother, the late Peter Lydon, who was killed by a trolley, was settled in favor of the latter after the jury, sitting in the Nashua Superior court, late this week, had rendered a verdict of $2,000 damages. The Elevated appealed to the full court, claiming that the verdict was wrong. The verdict was set aside by Judge Crosby and a new trial ordered. Yesterday a sealed verdict was rendered, which was returned by the jury before Judge Crosby at Dedham. The contents of the envelope were not made public, but it was understood that the death of Peter Lydon resulted from a motorman falling with a passenger who Lydon was struck.

ONE MORE WEEK OF KRONBERG ART WORK

The Kronberg exhibit of paintings, which has been an art event for the past week, at Doyle gallery, No. 163 Newbury street, contains twenty-two pieces of the artist's latest work, all of which have met with almost universal favor. The artist, Louis Kronberg, has recently returned from a two years' stay abroad. The exhibit will continue one more week.

GIRLS WINNERS IN SHIRTWAIST STRIKE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The union leaders to-day announced the surrender of three of the largest manufacturers in the city, thus practically ending the strike of the girl shirtwaist makers. At the Women's Trade Union League, Miss Mary Dreier, the president, said that the strike had been a great victory for the girls and that this afternoon all but about six hundred of the 50,000 who were originally involved would be back at work.

Here is a remarkable perspective sketch of the amazingly complicated railroad station at Dudley street, drawn by Staff Artist Moynahan. The drawing is the result of much careful study, and as near as drawing can be of a terminal with three levels, is wonderfully accurate.

Some who has puzzled and fought day after day to find his way among the intricate passages and puzzling turnstiles at Dudley street can fail to recognize the vividness of this picture. The person who has never been compelled to study out his destination or the right four cars or train doors at this station can see by this sketch just what the conditions are.

Note first the Forest Hills Elevated line at the left, Time stories above the street. It was this that led to the complications at the station. Then see the long "First Bridge" and the "Second Bridge," with its cement gates and passages leading from them down to the second story and the street level.

Count the many lines of railroad, surface and elevated, entering this station; then consider the scores of different car routes accumulated (or rather supposed to be accommodated).

Take a glance at those revolving gates down below. If you haven't cried it, take your family over there on your day off, and before you know it part of the children will accidentally go through a turnstile which works only one way, and the rest of you will be on the wrong side. If you can't get back to them, INQUIRE for the nearest exit (there are plenty of EXITS and ENTRANCES), and go to the next police station. The Lost and Found department may help you. The only way to get your family reunited will be to pay extra tickets.

Besides the Crystal Maze features of Dudley street, there are conditions there which actually menace life in the crowded hours of the day's traffic.

It took Mr. Moynahan two days to study out the "loops and levels" of this terminal. How long will it take the Transit Commission and the Railroad Commission to provide a remedy for the abominable conditions, stop extra fare extortion and protect the public forced to use this station?

City Hall Notes

Efforts will be made to have the last meeting of the Common Council on next Thursday evening a memorable one. The committee has invited Mayor Hibbard, Mayor-elect Fitzgerald, all the living ex-Mayors, the past presidents of the body and a number of other guests.

From an authoritative source comes the information that the fire commissioners who will replace Samuel D. Parkman will not come from the ranks of civilians, but will be active officials of the fire department. Deputy Chief John Grady is understood to be the man.

Although the new city council has voted to need in the old inspectable engineer at East Hill, it has not the authority to designate the place. Fitzgerald personally favored the common council chamber, but it is believed he will grant the Council's request.

Manus G. Fish, a Dorchester builder, wants to be superintendent of public buildings, according to his friends. Timothy L. Connolly, former president of the Common Council, is looking for the same position.

The special commission appointed to investigate city garbage collection and disposal has completed its report. It favors incineration plants.

Mayor Hibbard has approved an extension for a period of six months of the lighting contract which expires on February 1.

Former Water Commissioner William Welch is the latest to be mentioned for superintendent of streets.

ELECTION BOARD TO PREPARE JURY LIST

The Board of Election Commissioners to-morrow will begin to prepare the jury list for 1910. It will be about 2,000 names added. The board selects the citizens, and then the police investigate to find out if they are qualified. In this the Aldermen have often been importuned by constituents to use influence to get them on the list, but, besides for a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment as a penalty, for doing anything of the kind.

THE MAN FROM HOME

A Story to make the good red blood of Americans surge through their veins

THIS romance, written by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, deals with a curious admixture of American plainness and European high life; with a young Indiana girl dazzled by a title and in the clutches of a quartet of sharpers headed by an impecunious British peer; with a wealthy Indianian brother, a Russian noble in disguise, an escaped Russian convict and a faithless wife, and, most important of all, with the girl's shrewd, witty, courageous, resourceful guardian, Daniel Voorhees Pike of Kokomo. Daniel loves the Indiana girl and is determined to save her from the sharpers even against her own will. Daniel, with but a single friend to aid him, faced a most difficult dilemma in an international romance in which heraldry is more important than hearts and cupidity far more conspicuous than Cupid.

MEAT TRUST LAUGHS AT BOSTON BOYCOTT AND RAISES PRICES

In defiance of the people's demand for cheaper meat, the Beef Trust today began boosting prices in Boston.

Notwithstanding that consumption of meats has fallen off through the boycott, the trust intends to get its same aggregate profit by raising the charges per pound. Since the trust controls the market and can exact any price it pleases, it was easy to do this to-day in the face of the popular protest.

Shipments of meat to Boston have been reduced and, hoping that the people will soon tire of a no-meat or a short-meat diet, the trust is still doing business along the old "paddle-be-damned" lines.

The markets in the North End were almost deserted to-day. Meat dealers experienced very little business at Monday morning hings, anyway, so that it was impossible to get a fair estimate of the effect of the boycott on trades this far.

Marketmen Not Worried.

"So far the boycott has not affected the market," said one retailer at Faneuil Hall. "I don't believe that enough people are absolutely firm about it enough to stay away from meat unless prices go down with a bump.

"Under the policy of 'get all you can,' the Trust is boosting prices at wholesale to-day, so that if the demand is short the Trust will still get as much profit in the aggregate. You see, the Trust doesn't believe that the boycott will last.

"Because of the Trust's action retail prices on the best cuts of meat and poultry advanced this morning to the cheaper cuts prices either stood pat or fell off a bit."

Andrew T. Hunnewell, the "check" manager of Swift & Co.'s Boston establishment, who made himself famous and notorious—by his confidential "soak" con letter to branch houses, telling them to "get every cent you can out of the people, was still doing business in his office at No. 24 North Market street.

Hunnewell Keeps Mum Now.

This office consists of a large room containing thirty girl stenographers and some men bookkeepers, and in a corner room, along off, is Hunnewell's office. A reporter handed his card to the office boy and the office boy took it to the secretary and the secretary took it to Hunnewell. Hunnewell and the secretary talked for five minutes, after which the office boy announced to the reporter that Hunnewell was "too busy" to see him.

Hunnewell's "make no talk" instructions to branch managers went down on file in Swift Bros.-to-day. Not a soul in the employ of this branch of the Beef Trust will say a word about meat, not even the handlers on the piers. The only unpublished fact that developed from the trust office's spread over into the retail markets, where most of the dealers gave snarling replies to questions about prices.

These quotations were made at Faneuil Hall and Quincy markets:

SEND BEEF TRUST LEADERS TO JAIL, SAYS MINISTER

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 31.—Two months

prominent local ministers took the high cost of living as their texts for their Sunday sermons.

"I would rather see the heads of the Beef Trust sent to the penitentiary than the man who robs a bank," said the Rev. Asbury E. Kreps to his congregation at the Benefit Street Congregational Church. "Unless William H. Taft prosecutes these people to the office and the next President of the United States will be either Bryan or Roosevelt to furnish the fuss. The next government to crush the fuss of the people," said the Rev. John Hale Larry of the Edgewood Congregational Church. "Hold politicians to their party pledges. Beat them at the polls if they play tricks. Look up in the ballot box as your country's altar and never neglect your duty there. Let us hope that a new party can be raised up that will carry out the will of the people."

FISH IS SCARCER AND PRICES GO UP WITH LOUD BANG

And now the prices of fish go up with a bang. Cod, haddock and pollock have been high for prices since Saturday, and the wholesalers are looking for record prices during the week.

But there's precious little fish to sell. Scarcely any of these had time 22,000 pounds less than many single boats brought in last week. In one day last week 4,000,000 pounds were landed, and the already low prices were forced still lower.

Cod sold $2 and $3 on Saturday. To-day it is bringing from $3.50 to $5.50 per hundred. Haddock sold for from $1.50 to $2.50, while now it is quoted at $3.50 and $4. Pollock could be had in large quantities on Saturday for $1 and $1.25, but now it brings $3 and $3.50.

The buyers are paying through all of the available supply locally for above prices, and some of them would have to come to fill their own orders, as but less a large poundage arrives to-morrow record prices are expected.

PASTORS DISCUSS MEAT BOYCOTT IN SUNDAY SERMONS

The ministers of Boston in their Sunday sermons spoke on the fight against high prices.

Rev. A. A. Berle, D. D., said at the Shawmut Avenue Congregational Church:

"One of the severest tests of our ethics then is that which is now upon us, which the people have with them the issues of acting with responsibility; that is, acting together and cooperating long enough and steadily enough to break the power of the corrupt and greedy machine of iniquity which has seized upon almost every one of the necessities of life."

Rev. Frederick A. Wiggin, Unity Church:

"I do not believe that such a protest, expressed solely by refusing to buy, will meet the real demands of the case, but to attempt the protest will be a good thing, and if persisted in will accomplish the desired result. This protest is not to be directly against high prices or the combines which institute them, but against the government officials who fail to control them by the power of government."

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Warren Avenue Baptist Church, said that the meat protest committee, addressed 1,500 people at the evening service on The Bosch of consumers' Power," he said:

"This protest will not permanently reduce the cost of living. It will not last because we want to make an emphatic protest by refusing to buy meat for a week and to the nation. You know the outlook of the men who are interested in this protest on the committee and when they ask, good, substantial men to help them, you know that they are not planning to starve their people. They are bad conditions existing in our city."

Dr. H. B. Ware, superintendent of a sanitarium in Westboro, Mass., and a leading exponent of meatless diet, spoke to-day in Paul Revere Hall on the subject, "As He Eateth, So Is He." Dr. Ware declared that meat is by no means necessary to health and, therefore, to morals.

ROME UPHOLDS BISHOP FEEHAN OF FALL RIVER

ROME, Jan. 30.—The Vatican authorities, acting directly through the Congregation of the Council, have sustained Bishop Feehan of Fall River on the appeal of Monsignor Search and five priests against an order issued by the bishop, affecting transfers of priests soon after his consecration as successor of the late Bishop Stang.

When Mgr. Stang, Bishop of Fall River, died in 1907, Mgr. Hugh Smyth was appointed administrator of the diocese, and July a new Bishop of Fall River, Fr. Feehan of Fitchburg, was appointed.

During the five months of his incumbration Mgr. Smyth appointed eight new pastors to vacant missions. Father Brady was appointed to St. James, Father Leahy to St. Peter and Paul, Father Shandy to C. Killion, Father Metiee to North Easton and Father Doran to Hyannis. Father Sullivan was appointed to North Easton after the refusal of Father Metiee to accept this post. Father Doran was then appointed to Hyannis and Father Harold to Sandwich.

Cancelled Appointments.

Some of these nominations were made after the appointment of Bishop Feehan and only a few days before he was formally consecrated Bishop.

One of the first acts of the new Bishop was to cancel the appointments made by the administrator and send the priests who had accepted back to their original positions under the late Bishop.

Mgr. Smith and five priests considered that the Bishop had gone beyond his powers and appealed to the Apostolic Delegate in Washington to have the appointments declared valid. Mgr. Falconio sent the case to the Propaganda for decision. The Propaganda was considering it when new changes in the Roman curia intervened.

Favored the Bishop.

Learned canonists were engaged on both sides. Two questions were put before the Congregation of the Council, the first asking whether individual priests have power in America of making such appointments; the second, whether the bishop's action should be upheld and whether the priests should be reinstated.

To the first no formal answer has been given. To the second the Congregation replied in favor of the bishop. The whole question was submitted to the Pope by Cardinal Gennari, Prefect of the Congregation of the Council, and the Pope indorsed the decision justifying the action of Bishop Feehan.

LABOR

Headed by Thomas Cullen and John Mahoney, workers in the trade unions representing labor for over forty years, the movement to consolidate Boston Boilermakers Lodge No. 3 with the regular American Federation of Labor Union of that craft in this city is meeting with such success that today fully seven-tenths of the former independents have signed the new charter application. Messrs. Cullen and Mahoney are the speakers at the meeting of the old local yesterday. They urged all of the younger men who had not yet signed the new charter application to do so immediately.

Following the quarterly conference of the Massachusetts State Council of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers Union No. 46 at Memorial Hall, a request was forwarded to the international officers to-day for a special organizer to assist in the work of strengthening the general union. He added then to the Boston local of that craft the Brockton, Fall River, Lawrence, New Bedford and Fitchburg locals were represented in the conference.

While the union engineers of the country will cover a nominees over the grave of Samuel Gompers, their late-lamented president, it is likely that the Boston delegates assured, it being reported at the State Federation committee meeting of the organization yesterday that the plan had been approved by the executive officers of the union as a whole.

The committee reported that the money will be raised by voluntary subscription among the members of the Steam Engineers Union throughout the country.

Through the efforts of Samuel Gompers the threatened strike of the building trades unions in New York, which involved some twelve thousand men, is thought to have been averted. The strike grew out of a strike among the steamfitters and the carpenters, failing to induce the men to return to work, had ordered a general lockout. Mr. Gompers, after putting in several days in New York, returned to this home in Washington late last night confident that the trouble which he had suggested to both factions would be accepted and that no strike or lockout would take place.

Their eight months' strike against the open shop and the refusal of the local employers' association of Boston still unsettled, the La Follette Seamen and Firemen's Union of Boston have the assurances of the international officers of the organization that no strike will be inaugurated from headquarters unless the men have been given every local means of settlement. John A. Peeler, international president of the union, and D. Rosson on business connected with the strike, which involves the New York and Philadelphia, was the subject of the local union meeting yesterday.

Boston Central Labor Union executive committee will hold a special meeting at the union headquarters in Weiss Memorial Building to-morrow night.

To formally endorse the formation of a big federated trades council among the employees of the Boston & Maine Railroad, conference and meeting will be held to-day for a meeting of delegates of every union on the system, to be held at No. 164 Canal street, Thursday night.

The big organizing campaign instituted by the Metal Trades Council of Greater Boston recently to-day is reported to be bringing a large number of new members into the union ranks, especially in the shipbuilders, machinists, coppersmiths and the polishers and buffers' unions.

Harry P. Jennings has been elected as president and W. F. Gentry secretary of the newly formed educational and advertising committee of the Teamsters' Joint Council of Greater Boston.

Meetings of the Market and Commission House Teamsters' Union will be held on the first Friday of each month after this, commencing next Friday at A. O. H. Hall, Charlestown.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Late estimates on the percentage of recoveries under the new emollient treatment by Bright's Disease are as follows:

Where patient is much weakened and cries out for ejected in from 10 to 18 days, probably not more than 10% to 20% recover. Where patient is still able to walk around, facial symptoms this percentage is increased. In cases where patient has four thirty to sixty days of life the efficiency is very much higher.

Physicians all over the country are taking this out of too respect.

Albumen, casts and drops do not present recovery. The point is that the Renal inflammation should be attacked before the brain and physical system are broken down.

The new emollient treatment is known as Fulton's Renal Compound. It can be had in Boston at all the Riker-Jayson Drug Stores.

COCKRAN SAYS PEOPLE SHOULD RISE TO STOP DELAY OF JUSTICE

By W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—An editorial published in the AMERICAN voiced an information so much wanted and a suggestion of great value. It intimated the hope that popular pressure might induce Congress to call a convention for the purpose of revising the Federal constitution and it urges that such a body should be convened at once for the purpose of submitting an amendment providing for election of Senators by direct vote of the people.

Should a constitutional convention be organized there is no shadow of doubt that the suggestion of the AMERICAN would be adopted without any substantial opposition. Nor can there be any doubt that it would prove a powerful if not an irresistible influence in making the Senate the effective, though deliberate agency for executing the popular will which it was intended to be instead of the formidable barrier against wholesome measures of reform which it has actually become. The beneficial results that must follow such a salutary change can hardly be measured.

There is urgent necessity for another reform which it is tentatively suggested and for the hope of enlisting in its support Mr. Hearst and the chain of influential newspapers which he directs.

Hasten Court Proceedings.

If the system of government is to be effective for the maintenance of justice—in other words, if it is to be worth preserving—the people must be able to see by which judicial proceedings may be hastened, so that every cause instituted in a court of the United States must be finally adjudicated and determined within a reasonable time, to extend from the day on which suits are filed.

But justice to be complete must be prompt. Redress granted after a long period is necessarily inadequate. And in the country there is no pressing fact now more generally recognized.

It is of course true that delays in judicial procedure are not peculiar in the United States. They are to be found in all countries. Even in England, where courts have been subjects of complaint in every generation, the delays in the English courts where courts have no authority except to declare the law and to render judgment, long delays in disposing of them are exhibited, which, if they had not yet aroused the government, do not necessarily paralyze its operations.

Delay Is Grave Peril.

But in this country where the courts are supreme and every action, enterprise or proceeding of government may be arrested, suspended and rendered nugatory by process, long delays in deciding causes involving exercise of such stupendous power—delays which have become the rule, not the exception, are fraught with peril so serious as to threaten its existence. In the long run the results produced by these delays, which are at the moment public evils, become grave perils to the individual. The gravity of the peril they portend.

This country for several years past has been subjected to repeated panics. Peculiar time enterprises have proved extraordinarily successful in the accumulation of wealth. Some reaped enormous returns on their investments. Others who were engaged in the same line of business found that the cost of living has increased about 40% in the last ten years, while the rate of wages measured by their purchasing power has actually declined. The result must have fallen so very early.

Yet, though indignation is universal and public officials would gladly make reforms, they are helpless. Under the present system of government no effective measures for relief is conspicuous and lamentable. And the distressing feature of the whole business is that the agency by which remedial measures could be and must follow is consequently defeated by the judicial department organized to make justice supreme throughout the whole country and over every element of the population.

Powerless to Hasten Action.

As pointed out in a former communication to the AMERICAN, no federal law or rule renders will to see at once by challenging the jurisdiction under which the proceedings were instituted. It pursued by the State government they will insist that the matter belongs to the Federal authorities and if attacked by the United States they will contend that every issue is one of local control. Pending the renewal fight of the local courts to retain jurisdiction there would be a matter of contention, direct action and delay extending over years through a succession of courts, till popular interest has departed and the people, the underlying embarrassed by the delay, have become reconciled to endless little outrages.

The true decision of this preliminary question would be rendered long after the real merits of the controversy will have been made academic. Evidence will have become scattered or the people will protest that they cannot be expected to remember things that happened so long ago. And the Boss Court will be supreme.

Even in the rare instances where an aggrieved party has contrived to contest a corporation long, finally, been successful in securing a decision, the victory has always caused to the prosecuting attorney. The people would gladly make terms. The New York city gas case dragged on many years before it was settled. It cost the city millions without any warrant or justification. It was finally settled by the payment to some fraction of the money actually collected without interest, doing no justice to the people and saving from the city millions have never appealed to them as a practical proposition. Besides those all who obtained gas at reduced rates during the years of litigation had no interest in the matter. They had no prospect of restitution whatever. It was enough personally and hopeless despaired.

Law's Delay Aids Rich.

But the case has been decided within the months, some injustice would undoubtedly have been caused to consumers by it. Rejoicing would have been in order. Instead of rejoicing from a Federal court there would have been less

GETS THREE MONTHS IN SPITE OF APPEAL

In spite of his plea that he gives his wife $15 a week to help care for his two children, John Harrington, a charlestown boatman, was sent to the House of Correction for three months by Judge Bolan on complaint of his wife. Mrs. Harrington failed to support her or the children. Harrington made a pathetic appeal to the court not to be sent away

LOST DEATH RACE IN AUTO

Although he drove his automobile at top speed in a race with death, William P. Meehan was unable to save the life of his former classmate Edmund A. Fowler of Brookline, who had been thrown from his horse in the Fenway and had sustained a fracture of the skull. Fowler died on the operating table at the Massachusetts General Hospital, to which Mr. Meehan drove him.

Mr. Meehan was driving his car past the corner of Willow Pond road and South Huntington avenue when he saw Mr. Fowler lying unconscious on the ground. The sight of a horse running wild in the distance explained the occurrence. The injured man was lifted into the automobile by Mr. Meehan and Robert J. Buckley, his companion, and while Mr. Buckley telephoned the hospital to be in readiness for the patient Mr. Meehan raced for the institution at top speed.

Mr. Fowler was thirty-five years of age, single and lived with his father at No. 26 Park Drive terrace, Brookline.

BURGLAR TRIED TO KILL GIRL

"Quit that noise or I'll knock your block off." was what Miss Beatrice Sheppard, the young house maid at the residence of Joseph A. Haley, No. 65 Prospect street, East Braintree, heard as she was shaking up the grate of the kitchen stove today preparatory to getting the family break fast.

A big, husky man came from the dining room as the girl began to scream and struck her with the warning.

The girl dropped the coal over lifter in her fright as she saw the intruder and gave another loud enough to alarm the household.

The next instant she was knocked across the stove by a blow on the head. Then the burglar dashed through the hall to the front door.

The scream brought Mr. Haley and his brother running downstairs, and the fellow had only stunned her and she hurried to tell Mr. Haley who had occurred.

A search of the dining room showed all the silverware and three dollars in cash gone from the sideboard.

The silverware was later found scattered around the yard showing the burglar dropped the loot as he saw the lights in the house go up when the girl screamed.

21 INJURED IN GAS EXPLOSION

LEROY, N. Y., Jan. 31.—An explosion of natural gas in the house occupied by James de Rider and family, immediately following the destruction by fire of the Genesee Hotel about 3 a. m. to-day, caused injuries to twenty-one people, some of them being injured seriously and one man, T. W. Larkin, being injured to such an extent he may die. While the conflagration was in progress Frank Wilbur jumped from a rear window on the second story and was caught in the arms of a man.

Two sides of the De Rider home were blown out and a dozen of the windows were blown through doors and windows, all sustaining burns and injuries.

FINED FOR POLICE ATTACK.

Peter McIonald of Harvard street, Charlestown, was arraigned in Roxbury Court to-day for assault and battery on Police Reserve Officer Roland P. Green in Oriental Hall on Saturday night. He was also charged with drunkenness. He was fined $10 for the assault and $5 for being drunk. Both fines were paid.

BOARD REPORTS ON IMMIGRANTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31.—That the crowding of immigrants in the congested districts of the large cities is much less prevalent than is popularly supposed and that conditions under which they are living is much overdrawn, is stated in substance in an exhaustive report upon immigrants in cities, submitted to Congress to-day by Senator Dillingham of Vermont, chairman of the Immigration Commission.

An interesting fact developed is that one fifth out of every ten families own their own home. Home ownership is most common in Milwaukee, where one in five families owns its home, and rarest in New York where the proportion is one to 200.

JIM CORBETT SAYS JEFFRIES' GREAT GAMENESS WILL WIN

JEFFRIES CAN WIN SAYS CORBETT

James J. Corbett, the former heavyweight champion, is playing an engagement this week at the American Music Hall, and while there will write a series of articles on the coming championship battle between James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson, for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

By JAMES J. CORBETT,

Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Train Jeffries? I am certainly going to do all I can. I want to see the white man win this fight. I forgive Jeff twice and we've been best of friends. Jeff is a splendid big fellow. I have a world of admiration for him. He asked me if I would join his camp and help him with what my figure would be. I told him that money couldn't buy my services, but that I would be glad to go with him and work as hard as I did years ago when I helped me put Sullivan and laid it, couldn't pay it out exactly for it. I expect to be in fine condition when I start with his training—perhaps longer, and if there is anything I know can help him here more than welcome it.

What do I think of Jeff's chances? Well I'll tell you. Jim is a man altogether out of the ordinary run. Times that apply to ordinary men don't touch him. In my fights with him I have found him almost superhuman in strength, expecting powers and endurance. His strength is like that of a grizzly bear. He is absolutely game. He is so strong that it is so hard to knock him off his feet as it would be to push over the Old South building. If he tires he can lay back and rest and want can you do about it.

A fan is no good against Jeff because he has a neck like a post and a big bony head that you can't hit hard. It's hard to hurt Jeff hard enough to stop him. You can jab Jeff on the nose and he only pokes straight in against the jab.

Jeff Has Iron Jaw.

Jeffries can be dazed by a heavy blow on the jaw, of course. Any man can do that, but as I said before I don't think the effect does not last more than a couple of seconds. In our Coney Island fight I caught him a fair punch on the jaw and put the tip of his right hand as hard as I could let it go. He dazed me, but he was on me another. From that I saw the effect of a punch. Perhaps no one could use it from the ring-side as well as I could, for I suffered. But by the time I had pulled away his head was clear and he was as good as ever.

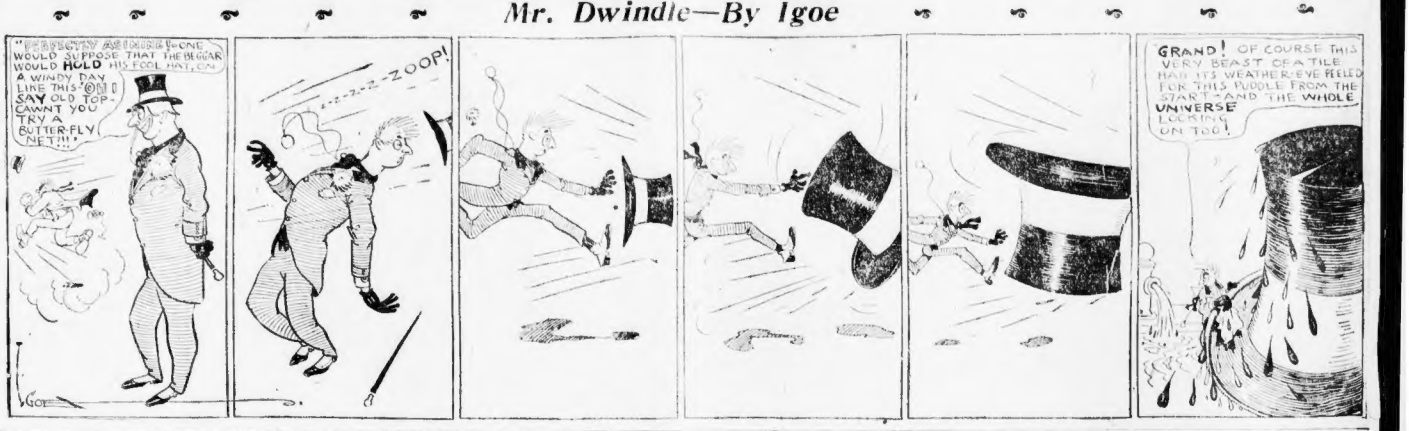
His Jeffries that recuperating power still? Well, that's the question, of course. I believe that he has. I think that Jeffries has never been beaten. He has simply been put out of the ring for a while. He isn't out. I know myself that a man can take more punishment than Jeff and

YALE FOOTBALL CANDIDATES ARE CALLED OUT TO-DAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

INDOOR BASEBALL PRACTICE STARTS FOR HARVARD MEN

Mr. Dwindle—By Igoe



YALE GETS OUT FOR FOOTBALL PLAY TO-DAY

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 31.—Yale will give the first gun to be heard emphasizing the next season today when the candidates for centre, quarterback, end, tackle, halfback and nine positions will report on the gymnasium floor. This is Yale's second year in attempting winter football practice. It was made an innovation last year when the coaches decided that it was desirable to attack the quarterback and centre rush problem early and drill the candidates for these positions in the details of the snap-back play. The experiment proved remarkably successful.

Captain Fred Daly decided to enlarge on the idea somewhat because Yale possesses practically its entire combine next Fall and half its backfield. So many of the players who ever wore a Yale uniform, including Captain Daly, Ed Lefevre, Hollis, Andrus, Philbin, Murphy, Cooney, Brown and Logan be graduated as freshmen players are not eligible and the material from which the eleven can be picked is at hand and can be worked as well at present as next Fall. Plans for the week call for drills on three of the afternoons a week on the gymnasium floor till about March 1. After the first position pouring practice outdoors will be begun and will last three weeks.

Ted Coy to Coach.

Ted Coy, captain last Fall, and head of the field coaching for next season, will direct the outdoor workouts. Captain Daly Coy is the only member of the permanent coaching staff for next Fall who has yet been named. A line coach will probably be appointed soon. It is understood that the plans have been perfected for Ted Hillebrand to coach the tackles for two seasons. Lilley has made plans to go into business and may be liable to accept the position.

Jack Cressley, who was head coach of Tom Shevlin's champion eleven, has sent word that he will be in the East most of next Fall and will be available for coaching. It is not certain whether Captain Daly will choose him as one of the regular staff of coaches or not.

Yale expects that the sport will be changed radically next Fall as regards rules, but the officials will make no difference in Yale's plans for the season except that it is taken for granted that the game will change considerably physically. For this reason Yale has arranged games with Vanderbilt and Fordham, the first eleven which would not have been met if the present game were played. Yale's schedule is practically completed and will be announced in about a fortnight.

There may be some blood spilled when those rivals on the mat, Joe Rosek, the Bohemian Bull, and Jim Proks, the terrible Greek, meet in a grappling match on the stage of the Columbia on Wednesday night.

STRAIGHT DOPE

FOR SPORT FANS

THIS IS THE EVENING THE TIGER Athletic Association makes memorable by its annual ball. Tonight's event, which is the eighth annual of the peculiar organization, will be held at 43d Fellows Hall, corner of Tremont and Berkeley streets, and it is a matter of regret that I will not be able to accept an invitation to make merry with the members. In spite of this handicap, I'm tipping it off that the ball will be worth while.

ISN'T IT ABOUT TIME THAT PITTSburg sent out the annual yarn about Honus Wagner deciding from the game for good and all. Great chance this year. Here's the way it ought to be: Having accomplished the ambition of his life, finding the pennant for its team, the great Wagner will be seen on the diamond no more, etc., etc. It will be an anaphora opening of the baseball season if we are spared this, but it is almost too good to hope.

THEY HAVE CHAMPIONSHIP TITLES to burn out on the coast, and it is a cold and dreary month in the fighting game when they don't settle at least one championship. Settling the boxing championship appears to be their especial hobby, and now they are going to let Monte Attell and Young Wolgast fight again for it. There are only about half a dozen legitimate bantams in the East who could take both of these youngsters in the same night and beat them by a decisive score really good boy. Truly the ways of these Westerners are wonderful.

CLAMP YOUR LAMPS ON THIS ONE, and then take three guesses as to whether the man who wrote the following is a blonde or a brunette. Good. You've guessed it right first time. It was sent me some time ago by Jerome Sheldon, of Putnam, Ct., and I have been trying ever since to muster up courage enough to print it. Jerome calls it a little poem and brazenly states that he "made it up himself." Ain't it awful, Bill?

Jack and Jim met in the metes and bouns
Jack was big
Jim was small
Jack got some beer
And it made Jim feel very bad
So Jim socked Jack on the nose.

A left and right started it
From mighty Jack's powerful mitts.
Which he got on your nose as the ring
Then Jim socked Jack on the cheek
And he socked Jack's other cheek.

It all went well until
Then Champion Jack got busy
Finally Jim left got some weight
Until Jim crowd could see it.
Then Champion Jack got busy
Then Jack landed a right cross
Then Jack landed a left cross
Jim's nose.

Jim came to the centre to meet his fate
Jim in the centre for his fate
Jim in the centre for his doom
Jim in the centre for his finish
And they mingled and they mixed
And they crossed and sheered, with all their might
For Champion Johnson, the colored.

That crowd Jerome speaks of as cheering for the noble knight when Jeff was counted out must look like the gathering of a band famebestrers, or the coal yards of a railroad company. Oh, you Jerome and that noble knight. Didn't you make a mistake in spelling it with a "k"? Wasn't we do with him then? "Wols, wols, wols."

AL LIMERICK, THE YOUNG HAVERhill boxer who put up a couple of rattling bouts at the Armory with Henry Myers, is matched with Young Kennedy, at the Unity Cycle Club, at Lawrence, the mill to take place on February 17. I don't know anything about Young Kennedy, but if I were to make a bet on the scrap it would be that Limerick will have to knock the other boy cold to get a decision. Unless my dope is wrong, Kennedy is hooked up with that Lawrence club so closely, that they can't see any one in the ring but him, and that's a pretty good way to beat it. I'm going to watch that bout with a lot of interest.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I have refer out Young Gomez of Medway and wish to state that he has fought 125 prize fights and is the champion flyweight of New England.
M. J. TORRES.

KID FRANCIS, THE NEWSBOY NEARchamp, failed to get a fight this Saturday night at the American Athletic Club, because he was anxious to have his countenance harmonize with the glad scenery he is going to wear at the Newsboys' Annual Ball, which takes place to-morrow evening. Francis was matched up in a six-round seance with Kid Wright and for the first five rounds he mussed up Wright's map, for fair. Then he happened to think that a tin ear, a black lamp, or a flattened beak wouldn't be becoming to his particular style of beauty when he arrayed himself in a Tuxedo, so he "boxed clever" during the final round. The result was that Wright pulled up on him close enough to come some of the court witless to call the bout a draw. So even if Francis will have to battle again to clear his title he won't have knobs on his nose when he shows at the ball.

HERE COMES ANOTHER MAN SET with a knack to fan that Welsh curve ball next season, and I think he knows what he's talking about. Read this and when you see Cicotte in Welsh number you'll know just how to approach him:

Straight Dope, Boston American:
In your recent write-up of Cicotte I find that you said he is to pitch against Welsh and Walsh. Cicotte has no terrors for me, but I must be very careful in pitching to Welsh, as he is a dangerous batter. The latter fit in the pitcher's groove, and if I am not very careful he will knock the ball out of the park. I spoil in English nonsense, but I think you get my meaning.
But I think you will find that Pitching Wolverines, in the above mentioned seance, is to be Cicotte vs. Walsh, and not Cicotte vs. Welsh. Even assuming that Welsh is to pitch, I am willing to bet that Cicotte will gladly forfeit the game to Welsh rather than pitch to him.
CHARLES ROSENBERG.

Strange Dope, Boston American:
Will an ambitious person or persons please inform the undersigned what is meant by "Cicotte's Delight"? Also when to Pitch and when to Walsh? Also when to Welsh and when to Pitch?

Papa won the middleweight title from Stanley Ketchel when he knocked him out in the twelfth round at Los Angeles on September 4, 1908, and Stanley won the same year. Ketchel regained the title by knocking Papa out. Ketchel never fought as a welterweight.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir:
As I have just arrived in this part of the country, I would like to get acquainted with the boxing fans in this section. I am a professional boxer and have fought many clever middleweights, but I have a welterweight record. I am willing to box any welterweight in all kinds of bouts. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am

PITCHERS OUTLAST MEN PLAYING THE INFIELD

The development of star pitchers is proceeding at a fearful pace, but the development of star batsmen seems to be utterly at a standstill. At the way things are going there will be regiments of classy pitchers in a few more years, while the art of batting will die out as soon as the present crop of slushy old hitters is extinct.

On every vacant lot in Summerville can be seen countless young pitchers at work, flinging, curving, learning the tricks of the pitching trade, and so completely overshadowing the young batsmen that big strike-out records have become the order of the day in high school and college.

It was Jim Hart, a few years ago, who laid on ambitious youngsters to train himself for a Cobb lawsuit, but a pitcher's promise pitchers did not last, whereas infielders could play the game for years and never should be in demand. With the modern pitcher, with his sure aim of speed and curves, outlasting the fielders by two years to one. Despite the wear and tear upon his arm, the modern pitcher is good for a longer distance life than most of his teammates, and the records show it, too.

Mathewson Still Shines.

How many men are now on the Giants' team who were there when Matthewson broke in? Big Six has seen a legion of them come and go, and is still good for many years. Wilson, a left-hander, has been pitching a long, long time, and is still capable. Bresnahan the old Cub was that a left-handed pitcher now broke down.

Clark Griffith, pitched, little league and big, for twenty years, and could prove only work effectively again. If he observed Sparks, of Philadelphia, was pitching before his present teammate's were born.

How many of the Pittsburgs have longer careers than Leever, Phillippi, Ward, Wiltse, Adams and all three and Camnitz?

Before all know that good old Cy Young began his twentieth year of league baseball this coming Spring, and is probably already either Worse or there. Cleveland team of 1890 where he began. Mathewson is in his fifteenth year, and Brown, of Boston's Pilgrims, is in his twelfth season of major league baseball. Plank, Joss, Walsh, Bender, Coveleski, Johnson, Falkenberg, Dineen, Donovan, Mullin, Overall, Bill Donovan of the Tigers was a star pitcher when Ty Cobb was a recruit, even minor league recruits. Powell, Howell and Ross, Walsh of the St. Louis Browns, outlasted a host of their contemporaries, while Hugging Allrock and Tannehill got through Washington fans' patience after many, many years of pitching.

Used to Get the Pitcher's Goat.

There will never be any batting slump big enough to confident and associative modern pitchers until the modern batters go after the pitcher's goat as they used to in the old days. The modern batter is too nice, too kind, too much of a gentleman to get on him. He thinks that he is unfair to even breathe the pitcher's air, but there is nobody who will go up in front of the pitcher and tell him that he's got his stuff, there is no fast ball, that he'll hit it over the fence, that he's afraid of the pitcher, that he's nothing but a bush leaguer, that he's got no control, that he's yellow, that he's a quitter, that he's a dub, and that's the way to get the pitcher's goat. There's nothing like a verbal attack to get the pitcher's goat. There's nothing like a verbal attack to get the pitcher's goat. There's nothing like a verbal attack

"I Told You So"

By ARTHUR ROCHE

WHEN William Henry Albert Jones,
He says, says he to me,
"I've been and gone and made a great
And grand discovery,"
I says, "Well, William Henry Al,
Perhaps you've gone and did
The very greatest, grandest thing
Since Hector was a kid,
And I believe you!" So I went
And told most every one.
And ev'rybody cheered like sin
To think what Willie done.
But when our Will was proved a fake
I wanted just to blow
The daylights out of them who said,
"Ha, ha! I told you so."

When Archibald De Clavering
De Vere De Vere, he said:
"I've found a lot of dope that proves
Napoleon wasn't dead.
When Napie said he died," I laughed,
The while I utter wept.
'Twas pretty crude, I know it was,
I utter wept, except
I knew some guy would come around
And say, "Oh, can the tears!
I've known Napoleon's death was faked
For over sixty years";
So what's the use of doping things?
Some chap will always blow
Around and sneer, and grin, and say,
"Ha, ha! I told you so."

Discontent of Both Riches and Poverty

By WINIFRED BLACK

A LITTLE girl lay down on her mother's grave and died the other day.

And when the mother went to the drug store to telephone to ask for help she fainted and the drug store people discovered that the mother had not eaten anything for nearly two days because there was no money to buy food.

In the same paper that told this little story I read that cigarettes were in fashion again this year because they were so expensive that the very high price of an cigarette meant that the owner must have money, or at least had it when she bought the hat, and that black pearls were again in vogue; and that it was bad form to let the hay horse go out with anything but an ermine carriage blanket.

I wonder if the little girl who lay down and died rather than to struggle through a world like the one she lived in wasn't after all, wiser after her kind and condition?

I suppose that poor mother walked the street right beside some disconcerted rich woman a dozen times, and unless she walked unusual paths she certainly must pass a dozen young girls who are making their own mothers miserable because they can't have just exactly the latest thing in jewelry or the newest thing in automobiles, "like the other girls."

If I had one of those "like-the-other-girls" daughters I'd make her spend at least half of her time getting acquainted with some of these "other girls," like the one who lay down and died of hunger and heartache and sorrowful discouragement the other day. I believe it would do her good.

Sycamores in Bloom

By WILLIAM SHARP.

LIKE flame-winged harps the seed blooms lie
Amid the shadowy sycamores.
The music of each melody a sigh
Thrills them continually.
The small seeds, the seed-bearing blooms make
Small birds innumerable find rest.
And shelter midst the sycamores.
Their songs seem low in a warm soft nest)
Are faintly echoed East and West
By the harps o' the sycamores.

The dreadful sin they make
Amidst the shadowy sycamores
Sweet delicate strains; the gold beams shake
The leaves at noon, and swift awake
The small harps of the sycamores.

O sweet Earth's music everywhere,
Though faint as in the sycamores;
Sweet wings beat, burst, break, bride pulse!
Sweet when as thus there wave in the
The red harps of the sycamores.

"Teacups and Gossip"

"Many a Reputation Is Drowned in a Cup of Tea."

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

While the ladies stir and lift the amber tea many's the good name they stir up and drink down along with it

WHAT a frail and pretty thing it is—this small person—Reputation. It's the shadow that tags you in your slow-gypsying around this jolly world.

Through your rough, hurried climbing up stony peaks, and in your dreamy idling in the sunny, level, grassy places it follows, glued to your feet, stepping fast or loitering slow as YOU step and loiter, saturating your garments and going abroad to the teasing nostrils of humankind, as the fragrance of a flower wraps it about and breathes its sweet breath into the Summer folks with full on you tooth and claw and air spaces—"Pay" it is, and stealthy.

And the shadow who lives with this may never looks the smallest bit like the one that runs at the heels of that man.

And MAY—as you go rakishly or stiffly, just what kind you are a-gypsying down the brown roads of the world's ways, doffing your hat and giving a merry or a sour word to the fellows you run up with day by day, kicking dust in their eyes or offering them a snack from your lunch and a posey to smell, funny how many of those try to pound that pretty, elf-pat of yours, your Reputation, into the dust!

The minute they set an eye on it and sniff its fragrance from far off they set to it to beat it up, shake it to shivers and bits and send it along with a black eye!

Maybe you have put in some of your idling times, when you had some little hours to dawdle along the highway, tearing up somebodies' shadows into little squares and turning them loose, fluttering to the four winds.

Maybe you have had "roguish" appetite!

Anyway, maybe, when you come on a bigger-than-you fellow merrily tearing up somebody's good name and fame you stand to one side with your fists in your pockets and your toes, too, lazy, or afraid, to sail in and help it out! Maybe you even reach and put in a dig just for mirth's sake.

But for sure there are perilous spots sitting innocently along the road now and then invitin' you to stop a bit and have a swig of tea. But don't you do it!

The dear Ladies it is, holding their various and sundry tea parties.

Dear things they are for sure (God love 'em!) but, oh, while they stir and lift the amber tea in their silver spoons many's the good name they stir up and melt and drink down along with it.

When you've dropped in and held your little saucer along with the rest, and have nibbled dainty, and have gone out wadded along with their flattery, and reputation from your heels, and if they don't drown it dead they send it along after son so battered up that you yourself wouldn't know it if you met it coming.

Letters of a Worldly Mother

No. 3.—Written to Her Son, Warning Him of the Dangers of Propinquity.

By Dorothy Dix

MY dear Son—I was glad to get your letter and to know that you were so pleasantly located. I was also interested extremely interested to learning that your landlady has a pretty young daughter, and that you seem to be the star boarder, and get the breast of the chicken, and the choice cut of the steak.

Alas, my son, beware of mothers with marriageable daughters who roost and feed you! Be sure that for the bread that they cast upon the waters they expect to see return to them in the shape of wedding cake. It is a truism that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and many women take that route to the altar. Therefore, view with suspicion the attentions of your landlady, and the pork landlady's offspring, for it is a notorious fact that no boarding house keeper was ever known to have an old maid daughter.

Now I am not saying one word of criticism against the boarding house keeper. I hold that it is every woman's maternal duty to marry her daughter off as well as she can, and I see no more shame in a woman's scheming to land her girls in a good home, with a good husband, than I do in a father bending every effort to settle his son in a congenial and prosperous business or profession.

The Seductive Chop and Coffee

Indeed, I have always said that had Heaven blessed me with a large family of girls that I should have opened a nice boarding house, where I could have discreetly lured eligible young men into the fold of matrimony with my Maude, and Sadie, and Jennie, and Maude, and Beth, and Clara by means of the seductive chop and the alluring coffee pot, over which my Maude, and Sadie, and Jennie, and Maude, and Helia, and Clara should preside with the air of a gentle household angel.

There's never a doubt that the plan would work, for the fates deliver a man bind and bound and gagged into the hands of the woman who has it in her power to make him physically comfortable. Men who have escaped the dangers of shoded conversations and the risks of moonlight strolls and the perils of house parties have gone down before a homely woman who knew how many lumps of sugar they liked in their coffee and the exact shade of redness they preferred their beef.

But, jesting aside, son, never forget that the very demon of matchmakers is propinquity. Somehow our very nearness to the people with whom we are thrown every day keeps us from getting a perspective on their faults and deshabilles, and so we are deaft into misunited marriages that keep the divorce courts busy and the world salted down with the brine of the tears of the unhappily married.

Many Men Fall Victims

You know dozens of men who are the victims of these lopsided marriages. When you see Smith, who is an intellectual giant, with his dull little doll of a wife, you wonder at his choice. When you see Jones, who has the manners of a Chesterfield and the poise that comes of centuries of aristocratic breeding, with his common little wife, who is as awkward in society as a bull in a china shop, you marvel at the combination. When you see Perkins, who is big, and broad, and genial, and generous, with his ignorant, narrow, pretty-dyed little wife, you cannot understand what madness possessed him that he should have picked out such an incongenial mate.

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, if you will ask Messrs. Smith, and Jones, and Perkins when they married, and where, and where they met their wives, they will say it was in some boarding house when they first came to the city, and that they were married as soon as ever they could see their way toward paying a board bill for two. Propinquity, son, has done its deadly work and united them to ladies that it otherwise they couldn't have seen through a telescope.

There are lonesome, you see, son. They liked women's society. They liked to go out with women and they didn't have any way of getting acquainted with girls in their own rank in life, so they made acquaintance with the Mamies, and Sadies, and Carries of the boarding house. And, because they were at the time of life when a man is in love with love and bound to talk sentiment to some woman, they quoted poetry and talked soft to Maude, and Sadie, and Carrie, who were handy, and the end thereof was a marriage that let both parties in for lifelong misery.

Beware of Propinquity, Son

Understand, I am not reflecting in any way upon boarding house keepers or their daughters, for there are plenty of such who are as fine ladies as any in the land, and whose daughters are as worthy to marry anybody. I am merely using the term in a Pickwickian sense to indicate nearness—propinquity—association— whatever it is that makes men and women who are thrown together come to believe that they are necessary to each other's happiness.

Therefore, son, I urge you not to mistake homesickness for love sickness, and just because you see some pretty and tidy girl every day, and have nobody else to make love to, don't commit yourself to her for keeps. Don't be like a child with a dollar in its hand—so anxious to spend it that he buys the first thing he sees in the shop. Of course, you may like what you get, and get a treasure. And, again, you may not.

If you perceive that Mamie—whom you thought vulgar at first—no longer gets on your nerves; if you observe that Sadie who bored you when you first met her, is beginning to interest you in her chatter about what "he said," and "I said," and "she said"; if at the same time you discover that you have quit being shocked by Carrie's gum chewing and Maisie's ignorance of grammar, then, son, pack your trunk and fly on the wings of fear, for propinquity is preparing you for your doom.

Take Refuge in Your Club

Men know the danger of being thrown continually in the society of any woman who hasn't a knack back and crossed eyes, and that is the reason that they have devised clubs for their protection, where no feminine foot may penetrate. Take refuge in one of these as in a sanctuary, for the girl who sits next to you at the table will get you if you don't watch out.

Take this from

Your loving

MOTHER.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

A FRENCHMAN with an imperfect knowledge of English was once called upon for an after-dinner speech. He struggled along manfully for a few minutes, managing to turn one or two good phrases.

Finally he excused himself from further effort by saying, "I will no longer overdraw on your time."

An Englishman sitting next to him at the table remarked: "Your speech was dosed clever, bah Jove! But you used the wrong word at the close, don't you know. You should have said 'I will no longer overcrowd upon your time.'"

"I see," said the Frenchman, "I used the wrong gender."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HASN'T SEEN HIM YET

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a widow thirty-five years of age who has taken up a correspondence with a gentleman I have never met. He claims to be in comfortable circumstances and has made a proposal of marriage. He wishes to have me come to him. He writes respectful and affectionate letters. Would you advise me to go.

PERPLEXED.

CARRYING on a correspondence of that sort is a very foolish thing. By no means go to the man or have anything more to do with him until you find out whether or not he is all he represents himself to be. Have him looked up and reported upon by some reliable authority in his home place. Then if he proves satisfactory, insist on his coming to you.

SPRUCE UP, YOUNG MAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three years of age and am in love with a young lady two years younger. She seems to regard me quite favorably, but has declined my invitations, as the same time give no excuses. Should I ask her again? She is a graduate from the high school while I am not. She is also a very good dancer and I cannot dance at all. Please tell me if these things should prevent me winning her.

H. H. W.

POSSIBLY the young woman has always had a very good excuse for not accepting your invitations. You must use your own judgment as to whether she [illegible] to bored or cannot. The fact that she has a little better education than you or can dance better ought not to have any effect on your chances of winning her. You might try to improve yourself.

NO TIME FOR LOVE MAKING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty and am deeply interested in a young man two years my senior. I have invited him to my home, but he does not come. He says he cannot leave his business, as he does not live in this town. He wishes me to visit him. We are not engaged. Would it be proper for me to visit him. I am sure he loves me.

A LONELY GIRL.

Millinocket, Me.

NO, my dear, you must not visit the young man. If he truly loves you he will find some way to call on you at your own home. Let him do the calling and the visiting, and he will appreciate you just twice as much.

TIGHTWADDO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a friend who has been keeping company with a Dorchester fellow for four years, and every year a few weeks before Christmas he stops calling for no reason and has never given her a present. Don't you think after going with my friend for four years the least he might do is to give her a present once a year, as he told me she was a good friend of his.

NELLIE.

IT is hardly right for the young man to drop the friendship at a stated time each year, but as far as the gift giving is concerned, most girls feel better about the thing if the young man does not make presents, especially before the engagement.

Anyway, maybe, when you come on a bigger-than-you fellow merrily tearing up somebody's good name and fame you stand to one side with your fists in your pockets and your toes, too, lazy, or afraid, to sail in and help it out! Maybe you even reach and put in a dig just for mirth's sake.

But for sure there are perilous spots sitting innocently along the road now and then invitin' you to stop a bit and have a swig of tea. But don't you do it!

The dear Ladies it is, holding their various and sundry tea parties.

Her Aviation Suit

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

I'VE seen her bathing in
A garb recklessly brief,
And thought her stunning (which
She was) beyond belief.
I've seen her in her smart
And ultra auto rig,
And thought her fetching quite
In coat and goggles big.

But—in soaring apparel she
Is surely a thrilling sight to me—
Gauntleted, booted and belted tight,
Wrapped and veiled for daring flight!
She is superlatively cute
In her aviation suit.

I've beheld her, too,
Queenly decollete,
As she reigned in her box
At opera or play.
I've fully idolized,
Approved with all my heart,
Each phase adorable
Of her modiste's fine art.

But—arrayed for her aeroplane,
She's a delight all over again.
No wings, no harp, but nevertheless,
More of an angel in that dress!
She's superlatively cute
In her aviation suit.

Girls of Yore —Wives and Sweethearts

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

HERE is a little bit of advice to gentlemen who marry for the second time and to young men who do not wed the first girls they woo. It also applies to my own sex, so take notice, ladies.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson had a favorite story, which finds a place in his recent biography by Mr. G. W. E. Russell, but it is interesting to find a parallel with it in a book of a very different turn, and the precedent antedates Sir Wilfred by several centuries.

The modern version is of a platform speaker who was trying to bring together a disunited audience on the score of women's rights, and who asked wildly: "Did any of you ever know a perfect woman?" "Yes, one," said a meek voice in the crowd. "Who was it?" asked the orator. And the meek voice replied. "My husband's first wife."

Now, the parallel occurs in Dr. Guido Biagi's "Men and Manners of Old Florence," which deals, among other worthies, with the philosopher and novelist, Paolo di Ser Pace, and one of his maxims is this:

"If thou art able, beware of taking a widow woman for thy wife, because thou wilt never be able to satisfy her, and every time that thou refusest her anything she may ask of thee, she will say: 'My other husband did not treat me thus.'" Yet truly, if thou hast already had another wife, thou mayest take her with greater safety, and if she saith, 'My other husband did not treat me thus,' or 'Blessed be the soul of So-and-So,' then canst reply, 'Blessed be the soul of Madonna So-and-So, who did not cause me this tribulation every day!'"

A Long Line of Martyrs

It is sad to think of the amazing numbers of men and women who have meekly endured the pain of being constantly and unfavorably compared to their predecessors. When a man marries for the second time he has no right, by look or word, to compare his second choice to his first.

He may have made a mistake, but he did it with his eyes open, and the least he can do is keep his opinions to himself.

To be constantly compared to her predecessor naturally arouses all that is least lovable in a woman.

There are dozens of aggravating little ways by which a man may make the comparison without actually voicing it.

He need not forget his first wife, but he can lock her memory in his heart, as a precious part of his life, which concerns only himself or the children she bore him.

With the second wife or husband an absolutely new chapter of life should be opened.

When a girl becomes engaged she immediately wants to know all about all the other girls her fiance has been interested in.

She is jealous where she should not be, and she really does not mean to be—but she can't help it; woman's jealousy was created ages ago as "the color that breathed o'er Eden that first primeval day."

The wise man will refer to past love affairs collectively, not individually.

SORRY HE SPOKE

Husband—I have paid your dressmaker who has been dunning you.

Wife—Oh, then I must go and order a new frock, or she will think I am offended with her.

HE AGREED

Mother (to her daughter)—You'd better accept Peter, my dear. He is a nice boy, though he may not be handsome. After all, good looks fade, don't they, papa?

Father—Rather!

STATE STREET, Jan. 31.—The stock market has lapsed into a period of dullness. This is natural after the reaction of last week, but the financial atmosphere is more clear than it has been for several weeks.

Sentiment is much improved and the professional element is now conservative and working for higher prices.

Reading was the feature in the forenoon trading with almost a 2 point advance on renewed rumors of a retirement of its second preferred stock.

Consolidated Gas was also a strong feature, stiffening 1⅜ points. Amalgamated rose almost a point and talk in Boston on this stock in view of definite knowledge regarding the copper merger.

Copper shares in the local market were strong with Lake Copper leading in the features. Renewed buying put Lake up 4½ points, with 2½ more realized.

Franklin rose 1½ points and sold at its highest price since January, 1907. Franklin is diamond drilling for the north extension of the Calumet & Hecla lode and is reporting state that the lode has passed through the overburden.

Wolverine on limited buying spurted 5 points, while Western buying of Mohawk caused a point spurt and United Fruit sold at highest record this forenoon.

Indiana was the only feature exceeding its previous high by selling at 78¾. Curb stocks were quiet and trading was on a diminished scale.

Slave Labor in Your Cocoa Cup

So Say the English. It Is Disgraceful if True. Not Difficult to Deal With, However

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

To England belongs the chief honor of doing away with human slavery—that is to say, slavery on the BODY-owning basis. The other, worse and more widely slavery—the grinding of the soul on a wage basis—hasn't yet been done away with. It will be some day.

Meanwhile, the world honors such men as Wilberforce and the others that fought against the ownership of one man's BODY by another.

The English people have made a good, hard and successful fight against such slavery. And they deserve credit—at least until their statements shall be controverted—for their present effort to stop slavery in the Portuguese islands off the coast of Africa.

An earnest and intelligent Englishman explained the situation to the members of the Chicago Woman's Aid Society at the Temple Sinai last week. This man was sent by Cadbury and other British sellers and manufacturers of cocoa to the Portuguese islands. He declares that men and women there are held slaves. They are captured, dragged from the interior a thousand miles down a great aken to the islands and kept there until they die—as slaves of the cocoa planters.

He admits that these slaves were well fed and well cared for. But he protests, in the name of humanity, against their treatment and against all those that buy the product of their slave labor.

This Englishman, Mr. Burt, mentions the fact that several large users of cocoa in America refuse to buy this slave-grown cocoa. He appeals to the women of America to help the slaves by refusing to buy cocoa or chocolate produced by slave labor, and he asks that all the women should write to the firms they patronize, demanding to know whether or not they buy cocoa of the slave-holding planters.

It ought not to be necessary for women to go to individual candy stores, or cocoa or chocolate makers or sellers, in order to discourage the Portuguese slave-holders—if they ARE slave-holders.

One man in Congress should find it easy to persuade his fellows that no product of slave labor should be allowed to come through the American custom house. The slavery charge is made seriously against the Portuguese islands and their owners. It ought not to be difficult to establish the fact by government investigation. And it ought to be impossible for any man to send into the United States the product of the labor of men and women held in slavery.

We fight in this country against the selling of the products of convict labor. How much more should we make it illegal to sell under any conditions the product of slave labor!

This newspaper hopes that some man in Congress will make it his business to take up the accusation that the English cocoa manufacturers make against the Portuguese growers in the Portuguese islands.

We shall be glad to tell our readers when action shall have been taken of an energetic kind.

Meanwhile, it is only fair to say that the statements made by the English, while apparently well founded and based on personal observation, are denied by the official representative of the Portuguese government.

This representative does not deny that until very recently the cocoa from the Portuguese islands was the product of slave labor. But he alleges that conditions have now changed. Laborers, he says, are taken to the islands only with their own consent, after they have signed an agreement. They are fed and clothed, and paid two dollars and ten cents a month cash, in addition to feeding and clothing. They are taken back to the mainland at the end of three years, and cannot engage in labor on the plantation at the end of that term unless by their own consent and on improved conditions.

If the statements of the Portuguese consul be true, conditions are not now as bad certainly as Mr. Burt found them. The credit for that improved condition—if it be improved—doubtless belongs to him and the other Englishmen interested.

Board and lodging and two dollars and ten cents a month, with a three years' contract, seems rather small pay perhaps at the first glance. But it is NOT actual slavery. AND how many men are there in America who would be glad if they could be sure of enough to board and lodge themselves and their families as they would like to be boarded and lodged and then have even as much as ONE dollar a month left over? The number would be considerable.

While talking about slavery in the Portuguese islands, of the slavery of grown men and grown women, we ought not to forget to talk about some of the slavery politely disguised under the name of "wages" that goes on in the United States.

It is a sad thing to take a full-grown negro away from his family, drag him down the slave highway, take him over to the islands and set him to work in the open air cultivating the cocoa bean.

But isn't it a good deal worse, in the name of civilization, hard times and political economy, to take A HALF-GROWN WHITE CHILD AND PUT HIM TO WORK IN A FACTORY OR MINE?

Of this Mr. Burt and Mr. Cadbury and all those interested in African slavery may be sure. WE KILL MORE WHITE CHILDREN ON A WAGE SLAVERY BASIS IN AMERICA TO-DAY THAN ARE KILLED OF BLACK GROWN MEN AND WOMEN ON A BODY SLAVE BASIS IN THE PORTUGUESE ISLANDS.

We ought to be indignant, and we are indignant, at the mere suggestion that the Portuguese are guilty of keeping men and women in bodily slavery, while feeding them well and clothing them well.

Too bad we couldn't afford a little real wholesale national indignation based upon THE FACT THAT CHILD SLAVERY EXISTS IN THIS COUNTRY, COMBINED WITH WHOLESALE CHILD MURDER, AND THAT EVEN WITHOUT THE MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCE OF SUFFICIENT FOOD, SUFFICIENT CLOTHING, REASONABLE EXERCISE AND SUNSHINE.

When Mr. Burt and Mr. Cadbury get through with their excitement about the Portuguese islands, will they or somebody else take a few trips to the South, and the North, and the West, and the East, of our country, to the cotton factories, the glass factories, the coal mines, WHERE THOUSANDS AND TENS OF THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN ARE ROBBED OF THEIR CHANCE, MANY OF THEM ROBBED OF THEIR LIVES, IN THE NAME OF POLITICAL ECONOMY ON A WAGE SLAVE BASIS!

Steena Oleson Is Back

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"STEENA," said my wife, "you may bring in the breakfast."

"Dar ban no breakfast," said Steena.

"What!"

"Ay tal ya, dar ban no breakfast. Dar ban no hens, and dar ban no milk. Dis butcher feller ban hanging himself in his store yust yesterday afternoon. He ban a Yerman feller, and in ban a rainy day, and prices ban so high he ban getting a boycott, vatever dis har boycott mean. So he yust hang himself."

"But isn't there another butcher around the corner?" asked my wife, cruelly ignoring the fate of the Yerman.

"Yes, I know, Steena, we must have our meals at regular hours. It is your place to see that things are ready when my husband sits down for his morning meal. Go around to that other butcher right away, and see that you hurry."

"Dar ban no other butcher," said Steena, with never a twitch on her plaid face. "He ban shooting himself dis morning, yust after Ay ban out of bed and going over to see him about meat."

"He shot himself, did he?"

"Yas, ma'am; dat's yust vat he do. He leave a little note and say he ban driven to dis har sad death by dis har boycott. Ay don't know vat Ay shall fix for yure breakfast, except Ay have some fruit. It ban dry oranges. Ay can't do any more."

"Go and get some eggs," I said.

"Ay can't getting eggs," said Steena. "Dis Maester Yenkins, he ban selling eggs to us, but he ban taking poison last night, and dis morning dar ban a black cloth on front of egg store. He say before he die dat all dese har hens ban boycotting him, and yes all dese hens ban boycotting a fellee, you can be do, dan!"

"Don't stand there chattering," I told Steena. "Go and get us something to eat. And whatever you do, do it now."

Steena went sulking to the kitchen, and began to toast some bread.

"Steena, come here," called the wife. "What do you mean by hanging the utensils around the way you do? Don't you think we have any nerves?"

"Ay shol yump my yob," declared Steena.

"What? Do you mean that you are going to leave us after we have shown you every kindness in the world? Would you be enough of an ingrate to do that?"

"Ay don't know vat yu mean by ingrate," said Steena. "But Ay tal yu dis har, Ay ban going to yump my yob. Ay ban going back to Sweden, var dar ant ban any of dis har boycott business. Over dar ye can getting all kinds of things to eat and nobody ban saying anyteng about dis har boycott business. Gude by."

She switched out into the kitchen, and we heard her singing:

"Yust one girl, only yust one girl,
Dar ban others, Ay know, but not my pearl
Sun or rain, she ban yust the same,
Ay shol be happy forever with yust one girl."

And so could we, if we could keep one.

Notes of the Meat War

By WEX JONES

BATTLE CREEK.—The meat strike is enthusiastically commended here, and the wheat-cut factories are working overtime to prepare for the expected demand. In a lecture delivered by C. W. Toast it was pointed out that there was a good precedent for the meat strike. "Didn't Nebuchadnezzar eat grass?" asked the speaker? "And why? Undoubtedly as a protest against the extortions of the Beef Trust of his time."

"Vegetarians rule the world, anyway," continued Mr. Toast. "We should all be as big and healthy as elephants if we would eat as much grass and foliage."

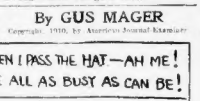
A resolution was passed by the meeting pledging each of those present to eat six hundredweight of chip-chopped wheat per diem.

Bonaldson.—Chief Bangaroo has issued an order that all missionaries must be left in cold storage.

Blah.—Prominent Eskimos here are alarmed over the increasing cost of living. Meats retail here at these prices:

Walrus, prime rib	.3 fishhooks
Walrus head, for soup	.1 fishhook
Walrus, pickled flipper	.1½ fishhooks
Whale, boneless blubber	.6 fishhooks
Whale, tail and flukes	.1½ fishhooks
Seal, choice cuts	.3 fishhooks
Gannets' eggs, dozen	.4 fishhooks

These exorbitant prices have driven the Blah Igloobobbers into forming an association to boycott meat sellers altogether.



Wellesley.—At a mass meeting of the Wellesley College girls it was unanimously decided that all should live on fudge until the cost of living became lower.

Nulnik.—All the lions in this district have agreed to live on leaves and bob and avoid eating hunters—at least until Bwana Tumbo has gone home.
